THE MOTOR SHOW AT OLYMPIA.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Monday.

Although there are more coloured bodies at Olympia than at any previous Show, the general aspect is not so vivid as the exhibition of the past three or four years. The colours now adopted are of a quieter shade than the brilliant hues which marked the earlier post-war cars. The gaudy bright red and yellow sporting cars are not so much in evidence, and where bodies are described as "red" they are of less obtrusive shade. The general colours of brown, fawn, grey, green or blue are pleasingly subdued, and the latter is available in a wide variety of tints.

Some of the enclosed cars for town use still maintain their dignity in black, but this is usually relieved by a touch of colour, even though it may be confined to the lining marks of the panels and doors. The same tendency is to be observed with regard to the upholstery. It is usually tinted, but the shades are of a less striking colour than heretofore, and in most cases harmonise well with the colour scheme of the bodywork.

Evidence of improvement in mechanical design is provided by the claims made by most manufacturers regarding the speeds obtainable. In some cases where outwardly the engines show no change compared with those installed last year an increased speed is mentioned. This has been brought about by better balance in the moving parts, improved valve mechanism, more efficient lubrication systems, and similar changes which have only been made after exhaustive trials and many experiments.

In one case it is known that improved valve mechanism has added ten miles an hour to a large car. Speed may not always be required, but it is a convenient asset, and there are often moments when a little power in reserve is extremely useful.

This reserve power is not confined to the large or the apparently high-powered car, as one of the smallest touring cars in the Show has lapped Brooklands at eighty miles an hour. It is not claimed that this speed can be maintained, or even reached, on the road, but it is an indication of the capabilities of the modern engine, which, even in the case of the smallest, is incomparably better than the power unit of even a few years ago.

Absence of drastic change on many models shows that general mechanism has become standardised, while prices appear to be stabilised for a time at round about the present level. These two factors have had much to do with the increased business which has been transacted at Olympia.

There is no longer a prospect that a car bought to-day will be out of date in a short time, and there is little likelihood that purchasers at present prices will find themselves annoyed by any great reduction in prices in the near future. This standardisation of design and stability of price has influenced many who were hesitating regarding a new car, and the very complete character of the equipment now provided has also added to the attractiveness of the 1926 models.

MORRIS COWLEY.

The most conspicuous difference between the 1926 Morris Cowley and the previous models is the fitting of a tie rod between the two dumb irons, which somewhat alters the appearance of the front of the car. An internal change is the fitting of alloy pistons in place of those of cast-iron formerly used. Coachwork has been considerably improved, and the upholstery is of a higher grade. Outside handles fitted to the doors of the open cars are another little addition. Four-wheel brakes are fitted, unless the purchaser desires otherwise, in which case the Cowley is obtainable at a lower price. At the reduced prices the Cowleys are really remarkable as examples of value for money. Corresponding reductions have been made in the prices of Morris Oxford cars, which are now fitted with thermostatic control of the water in the cooling system. Equipment is of a lavish description, and upholstery and fittings are extremely good. Dunlop re-inforced balloon tyres are fitted on all models, and the equipment of the Morris Oxford includes dipping head lamps.

THE SWIFT.

Typical Swift sturdiness shows itself in the new 12/35 h.p. Swift engine, which has four cylinders, side-by-side valves, and side camshaft driven by helical gearing. The four-speed gear box is combined with the engine, and fabric-faced plate clutch. The four-wheel brakes are of a very efficient character, and the facility with which they can be adjusted is a good feature. The new model has enclosed shaft in a spherically-mounted torque tube, while the 10 h.p. model continues to have an open propeller shaft. Both models are obtainable as two or four-seaters, and both are thoroughly worthy of the Swift reputation for clean design and good material and workmanship.

THE TROJAN.

The Trojan is now produced in two forms. One is the familiar utility car, with solid tyres, and the other is of a more conventional design, with pneumatics and a three-door four-seater body. It was a happy idea to make the solid-tyred wheels interchangeable on the same hubs with the pneumatics. The new model has a more orthodox appearance than the utility model, but the latter is such a useful vehicle that its inclusion in the programme will probably be justified. The engine, as heretofore, is placed in a horizontal position and has four cylinders working on the two-srtoke principle, with each pair acting together, with a common combustion chamber.

THE TRIUMPH.

The new 15/50 h.p. Triumph, which has an actual Treasury rating of 14.9 h.p., is shown in three forms—a chassis, four-seater saloon, and touring car. The saloon is one of the nicest cars of its type in the Show, and is distinguished by well-proportioned lines presenting an exceptionally neat outline. The four-cylinder engine has side-by-side valves and chain-driven camshaft. The three-speed gear-box is integral with the engine and single dry plate clutch, with fabric face. The foot brake operates on all four wheels and is of the hydraulic type, while the hand brake acts on the transmission. The five-seater touring car has four doors and adjustable front seats, the all-weather equipment being very efficiently arranged with metal-framed windows.

THE SUNBEAM.

The Sunbeam range for 1926 includes one four-cylinder model, one eight-cylinder, and two with six cylinders. The 30/90 h.p. model, with eight cylinders arranged in line, is shown as an enclosed limousine, which, as might be supposed, considering its origin, is a really handsome car. Another fine-looking car is the 14/40 h.p. four-cylinder tourer, which has a body of Sunbeam dark smoke blue and antique leather. The 20/60 h.p. is shown as an enclosed limousine, painted claret colour and upholstered in leather, while the six-cylinder three-litre model is on view as a sports car, with a body which conveys an impression of speed at every point.

THE HILLMAN.

The new Hillman is one of the features of the Show. It is on view with various types of bodywork and as a stripped chassis. The specification includes four-cylinder engine, with bore and stroke of 72 and 120 mm., giving an actual rating of 12.8 h.p. Pistons are of aluminium; clutch is of the Ferodo plate type, and engine, clutch and gear-box are in one unit. Four speeds are provided, and control is on the right. Valves are of the side-by-side type, with silent chain drive. The touring car presents a very clean outline, while the enclosed bodies are well made and meet all the requirements of those desiring a medium-powered all-weather car of clean design and honest workmanship.

THE ARMSTRONG-SIDDELEY.

In the Armstrong-Siddeley programme there are only three engines, but there are four chassis sizes and a wonderful variety of bodywork. The four-cylinder model of 14 h.p. is available as a 2/3 seater, family five-seater, four-seater touring car, saloon, landaulette, three-quarter landaulette and a coupé, and the car looks equally well in any of the various forms. The intermediate model has a six-cylinder engine of 18 h.p., and is produced with a long and a short chassis. The 30 h.p. Mark II. six-cylinder maintains the distinctive lines which have marked it since its introduction. It is in every way a noble car and the bodywork, which includes a seven-seater open touring body, and various types of enclosed carriagework, is handsome in design and workmanship. All Armstrong-Siddeley cars for 1926 have fuller equipment, front wheel brakes, engines which are smooth-running and powerful, and bodywork which is really good.

THE AUSTIN.

No change has been made in the chassis design of Austin cars, but various little improvements have been made. The "Seven," for instance, is to have a speedometer as part of its equipment in future, and on the other models the bodywork has been improved and the equipment has been augmented. There is no doubt as to the wisdom of maintaining the 7 h.p., 12 h.p. and 20 h.p. models in their present mechanical form. The "Seven" is a remarkable car, and the diminutive engine is capable of pulling any weight up to about 32 stone with ample power. The "Twelve" is a leader of its class, and as a touring car, or with enclosed bodywork, of which a good choice is given, it is an attractive production. The Austin "Twenty" is a capacious, comfortable car, and is even more distinguished in appearance than the previous models. The enclosed bodywork is thoroughly good, and the Mayfair landaulette is an exceptionally nice car. It has comfortable accommodation for seven persons, and the front compartment can be separated from the rear by raising a glazed partition.

WOMAN AND HER HOME

ON DRESSING SMARTLY.

"JEAN always has the right clothes for every occasion. How does she manage it? I earn twice her salary and yet never look so well-dressed as she does."

My young friend's comparison was not exaggerated. Side by side with Jean she looked dowdy, although her clothes generally cost more than the other girl could afford.

Jean had justifiably earned the reputation of being "well turned out," but I had never heard anyone say the same of my friend, who, nevertheless, loves pretty things and does not think it waste of time to try and make the best of her appearance.

I think the difference between the two girls lay in the forethought and careful planning which Jean devotes to her wardrobe, but which my little friend neglects, apparently considering it unnecessary. Jean, however, always has said that she would never be able to buy the clothes she requires unless she carefully apportions her income in advance.

"Every spring I make a list of the essential garments I shall need throughout the year," she told me. "I keep separate little bags or purses, and in these I save up for different things. One purse is devoted to clothes and another to dress accessories, such as gloves, stockings, ribbons, and so on; in another purse I save up to pay various subscriptions, like my library and tennis club subscription. In this way I can arrive at some idea of how much I dare spend on pleasure. I also set aside a sum—approximately—for daily expenses, such as lunches and fares.

"You have no idea how the memory of these little purses strengthen me when I am tempted to buy something which looks most attractive in a shop window."

I could not help contrasting these methodical habits with the behaviour of my young friend. She generally shops in a hurry—"because she must have something to put on"—and her purchase sometimes involves her in further expenditure, because the garment or hat she has bought does not match anything she already possesses. In her haste she is often forced to pay more than she had intended, because time does not permit her to look round for a less expensive article. When she has appreciated the reason of Jean's successful dressing she will doubtless try to emulate her in planning out her wardrobe methodically and apportioning her income to meet her needs.

LETTUCE DISHES.

USEFUL as lettuces are for salads and other uncooked dishes, there are many other ways in which they can be used to advantage, and these, as a rule, are not known.

Stuffed Lettuce.—Two large lettuces should be washed and trimmed and then boiled in salted water for fifteen minutes. They should then be carefully lifted from the pan, plunged into cold water, and afterwards drained.

Prepare the stuffing by mixing together two ounces of breadcrumbs, one ounce of chopped suet, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, half a teaspoonful of mixed chopped thyme and marjoram, the grated rind of half a lemon, pepper and salt, and one egg. When the stuffing has been prepared the lettuce leaves should be gently opened and some of the forcemeat inserted in each. They should then be tied with tape and placed in a casserole or stewpan, with a pint of good stock or gravy, and simmered for another fifteen minutes. Then untie, place on a hot dish, and serve with the gravy poured round.

The stuffing for this dish can be varied in many ways. A nut stuffing is very good, or they may be stuffed with chopped hard-boiled eggs, mixed with a little shallot and some tomato.

Lettuce Marinade.—Trim and wash two or three lettuces, according to size and requirements, and pluck the leaves apart. Place them in a pan of boiling salted water and boil for fifteen minutes. Then drain the leaves and chop them lightly.

Meanwhile, have ready in a casserole a pint of white sauce, to which has been added some grated nutmeg, pepper and salt. Place the lettuce in the sauce, and simmer gently until tender. Draw the pan to the side of the stove and stir in the beaten yolks of two eggs. Stir until the eggs thicken, and then turn the mixture into a dish and garnish with sippets of fried bread or toast.

Braised Lettuces.—Wash, trim and parboil four cabbage lettuces, and drain well, taking care to keep their shape. Place them in a pan with a little butter. Season with pepper and salt, and cover with slices of bacon, sliced onions, sprigs of parsley, a sprig of thyme and one of marjoram, if obtainable. Add half a pint of stock, cover with a lid, and cook slowly on the stove or in the oven for about an hour and a quarter. Remove the lettuces very carefully from the pan on to a hot dish; strain the liquid into a small pan and boil rapidly without a lid until it reduces to a thick sauce. Pour this over the lettuces and serve at once.

FOR THE COOK.

FRUIT CAKE (Method No. 1).
One pound flour, half pound sugar, half pound butter, eight ounces sultanas, eight ounces currants, eight ounces peel, pinch of salt, one heaped teaspoonful baking powder, half teaspoonful lemon essence, four eggs, milk to mix.

Rub the butter into the flour, add sugar and cleaned fruit, also salt and baking powder. Beat the eggs well. Add the essence and about one breakfast cupful of milk. Add this to the dry ingredients. Mix all to a soft paste. Beat well. Turn into a greased tin, and bake in a moderate oven about three and a half hours.

WALNUT CAKE (Method No. 2).
Four ounces butter, four ounces sugar, three eggs, five ounces flour, one and a half ounces shelled walnuts, half teaspoonful baking powder.

Cream the butter and sugar, add flour and eggs alternately. Add chopped walnuts, then the baking powder. Bake in a moderate oven about 40 minutes, according to size of tin used. When cold, split and spread with walnut mixture. Ice with water icing, and decorate with walnuts.

Walnut Mixture. — Three tablespoonfuls ground almonds, one teaspoonful vanilla essence, one tablespoonful chopped walnuts, three tablespoonfuls apricot jam. Mix all together, and use as required.

SWISS ROLL (Method No. 3).
Three eggs, three ounces sugar, three ounces flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, flavouring as liked, hot jam.

Beat the eggs and sugar together for five or ten minutes; add flavouring. Mix baking powder and flour, sift into mixture, fold lightly together, turn into a prepared "Swiss Roll" tin. Bake in a hot oven five to six minutes till firm to touch and a golden colour. Turn out, spread with hot jam, roll up tightly.

GINGER BREAD (Method No. 4).
Half pound butter, half pound treacle, half pound sugar, one pound flour, two teaspoonfuls cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls mixed spice, two teaspoonfuls ground ginger, one teaspoonful ground cloves, one teaspoonful baking soda, quarter pound raisins, quarter pound almonds, half pound preserved ginger, four eggs.

Melt the butter, treacle and sugar. Mix the dry ingredients, add prepared fruit, beat the eggs and mix all together. Bake in a moderate oven for three hours.

MANCHESTER PUDDING.
Half pint milk, two ounces breadcrumbs, one ounce butter, one and a half ounces sugar, rind of half lemon (grated), two eggs, short or flaky pastry, raspberry jam, three ounces castor sugar.

Boil the milk and pour on to the breadcrumbs; add butter, sugar, lemon rind, and, when cool, the yolks of eggs. Line a pie-dish with the pastry, put a layer of jam on the bottom, then pour in the mixture, and bake three-quarters of an hour. Whip the whites stiffly, add three ounces castor sugar, pile roughly on top of the pudding, sift with castor sugar, and bake till crisp.

MARMALADE PUDDING.
Five ounces breadcrumbs, half pint milk, two eggs, two ounces castor sugar, two tablespoonfuls marmalade, one ounce butter.

Warm the milk, pour over the breadcrumbs, add sugar, butter and beaten eggs, and marmalade, which must be melted. Turn into a well-greased mould, cover with buttered paper, steam one hour, allow to stand a few minutes to shrink, turn out, and serve with marmalade sauce.

Marmalade Sauce.—Two ounces sugar, half pint water, two tablespoonfuls marmalade. Boil all together very rapidly for ten minutes. The sauce should be of a syrupy consistency. Strain and serve.

STEAMED GROUND RICE PUDDING.
Two ounces rice, two ounces flour, two ounces brown sugar, half teaspoonful baking soda, two ounces raisins, two ounces suet, three-quarter teacup milk, pinch of salt.

Stone and chop the raisins. Chop the suet very finely. Mix dry ingredients well together. Add the milk, making the mixture very moist. Pour the mixture into a greased tin, cover with a greased paper, and steam three hours.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES.

TONE AND COMMENT

DUBLIN STRONG.

GUINNESS AND COURTAULDS BOOMING.

Outside of the strong favourites, Guinness, Courtaulds, and Textiles, there was generally quiet, fluctuating prices in local securities on 'Change yesterday, but in the "specialities" mentioned continued buoyancy again developed, and prices were carried rapidly upwards on large and influential support, which did not slacken all day, as prices closed after an exciting session at practically top quotations reached.

National Government Loan improved, and British Funds, where altered, show further improvement. Dealing in Banks was limited. Bank Stock and Provincials were offered at lower prices, but Nationals were harder. There was sensational support for Guinness Ord. Shares, and prices may be said to have moved upwards by pounds at a time instead of fractionally, as is customary. The opening price, 70, showed the market all buyers, and the next price was 71, with the final quotation up to 72½. All kinds of rumours and reports were in circulation, but naturally without official authorisation.

Marconi Shares were easy. Home Rails fluctuated quietly. Great Northern again advanced, and the rally from the lowest is now eight points. Great Southern, however, eased. Dublin United Tramway 3½ p.c. Debs. both gave way a point. Big buying was continued for Dunlop Rubber Ord. Shares at a further few pence advance. Parent Trust issues remain sellers without so quoting.

Arnott Shares were absorbed. Textiles were buoyantly disposed, with general gains and practically highest prices reached at the close. Courtaulds were bought with persistent confidence, and once more established a fresh record. Coats Ord. again rose prominently in a cheerful market, and other market leaders in this group met with sustained investment attention. Tobaccos hardened a few pence, as did Lever Bros. 8 p.c. Pref. Gouldings were scarce and improved again. Joshua Watson and Co. £5 Shares (£4 paid) were bid for ineffectually at a sharp advance on previous marking. Yam Seng and other Rubber Plantation Shares were a trifle easier on the practically proposed "freeing" of the market from the Stevenson restriction control, which, of course, would mean full supplies on and after 1st prox.

LONDON QUIET.

RUBBERS ACTIVE AND LOWER.

An irregular tendency, characterised the London Stock Markets as a whole yesterday, and, with the exception of the Rubber market, business was on a quiet scale. As anticipated, there was a large accumulation of orders in the Rubber share market, but, owing to the temporary unsettled condition of the commodity market and profit-taking sales, a weaker tendency was evident. Later in the day, however, a firmer tone became noticeable on lack of official confirmation as to an extra 10 per cent. increase in the exportable allowance from November 1st. Spot rubber opened at 4s. 0½d. per pound, but later dropped to 3s. 11½d., while October, which commenced at 3s. 11d., went to 3s. 9d., 3s. 10d., and then 3s. 8d. per pound. The London stocks of the raw material show a decrease of 286 tons on the week to 4,703 tons. Business in the gilt-edged market remained very quiet, but a generally steady tone was manifest, and prices were maintained at week-end levels. A steady tone characterised the Foreign Government Stock market, and, with a couple or so exceptions, prices were unaltered.

WATNEY COMBE BONUS.

As indicated by the Chairman at the annual meeting, the directors of Watney Combe Reid and Co. (brewers) propose to capitalise £796,351 of the undivided profits, which will be distributed among the holders of the Deferred Ordinary Shares in the form of fully-paid Deferred Ordinary Shares of £1 each. This is equivalent to a bonus of 33⅓ per cent. An extraordinary general meeting will be held on 14th October to alter the articles of association, and at a subsequent meeting a resolution will be submitted authorising the directors to increase the capital to £8,385,481. The new shares will rank for dividend as from 30th June last, and will be converted into Deferred Ordinary Stock when fully paid. When the proposals now made are carried into effect the capital will be restored to its original amount.

SWEDISH IRON TRUST.

According to the "Weekly Review of Foreign Exchanges," published by Messrs. Samuel Montagu and Co., negotiations are in progress regarding the amalgamation of the six largest Swedish iron works. Two further iron works are to join the concern later. The eight companies in question possess a capital of 36,000,000 crowns (about £2,000,000).

CHANNEL ISLANDS TAXATION.

The Imperial Government in a memorandum to the Jersey States asks the islanders to assume some of the burden of Imperial taxation, proposing £1,041,000 from Guernsey and £870,000 from Jersey, including arrears for war pensions to April 1 last, and an annual payment of £50,850 from Guernsey and £42,600 from Jersey, this sum to be diminished as pensions decrease. This has created a sensation in the Channel Islands, who claim that when the Imperial Government asked for Channel Islands men for the war it guaranteed the pensions.

GEORGE NEWNES BONUS ISSUE.

Following upon the extraordinary general meeting of George Newnes, Ltd., held on 23rd ult., a second extraordinary general meeting was held yesterday, when resolutions were unanimously passed capitalising part of the accumulated profits and authorising the distribution of 200,000 Ordinary Shares of 10s. each to the existing shareholders as fully paid in the proportion of one for every two existing Ordinary Shares.

RUBBER RESTRICTION.

The telegram from Colombo (Ceylon) published in our issue of yesterday outlines provisions which at present are only proposals. Presumably they have also been submitted to India and Malaya, whose approval will be required before the plan can become operative. The effect of the suggestions would be to expedite releases of rubber by one-quarter, for under the restriction scheme the 95 per cent. export quota could not occur until 1st February, when it would come into force automatically if the price of rubber had been maintained at more than 1s. 6d. per pound for the preceding three months. If the restriction scheme is modified on the lines indicated it will come as a surprise to the market for the commodity and for the shares, where the view has been held that the Stevenson plan would be adhered to until the 100 per cent. of standard output was reached. The Stevenson rubber restriction scheme came into operation on 1st November, 1922. In August and September of that year the price of rubber had fallen to about 6d. per pound, and nobody could sell at a profit. The scheme was slow in its working at first, but in November last year exports were reduced to 50 per cent., and this proved to be the turning point. The price began to rise. In July last it rose to 4s. 6d. per pound, and it is now at 3s. 11½d.

AUSTRIAN RECONSTRUCTION.

In a long and very instructive article on the wonderful progress of reconstruction work in Austria, a writer in the "Monthly Review" of Barclays Bank makes the following reference to the remarkable progress of the farming industry, and many of his statements might profitably be taken to heart in the Free State:—"Agricultural production is not far removed from the 1913 level, and active steps are being taken to develop this industry. The short term credits granted out of the remainder of the proceeds of the Reconstruction Loan, for the purchase of fertilisers have produced very beneficial results, while it is considered that agricultural production could be still further expanded by improved education and by extended credit facilities, particularly of a long-term character. In fact, the report states that the essential soundness of what is, after all, Austria's greatest industry is, perhaps, the brightest feature of the present situation, and when it is remembered that in 1924 the gross imports of all foodstuffs into Austria amounted to approximately 815 million gold crowns, or over one-third of the total imports, the improvement in the Austrian situation which would result from an enlarged agricultural production may be readily appreciated. The output of labour per head has steadily increased since the stabilisation scheme came into force, and there has been a noticeable advance in good-will and discipline, the introduction of piece-work methods having assisted in these directions."

LONDON MOVEMENTS.

A quiet tone prevailed in the Gilt-edged market yesterday, and final quotations showed no alteration from last Friday's levels. A generally steady tone ruled in Foreign Government Stocks, but here and there a slightly harder tendency became manifest. French Loans were quiet and unaltered, the Fives being 17 and the Fours 13. Among Reconstruction loans the only change was that of a gain of ¼ in Hungarian 7½ per cent. to 99⅞. Chinese 4½ per cent. 1898 were a point higher.

RAILS STEADY.

Home Rails made a steady start, but an easier tendency became noticeable later in the day. Prices were fairly well maintained, however, and with the exception of a decrease of ½ each in Great Western Ord. and Mid. Ord. and a small improvement in North Eastern Def. Ord. to 20⅝ week-end levels were repeated.

Among Colonial and Foreign Rails, Argentines were quiet and without movement. Cordoba Centrals, however, were pushed further forward, the Ord. gaining ½ to 21½, while the 1st Pref. put on a similar amount to 69½. Entre Rios Ord. were again a firm market, and a further improvement of a point was recorded. San Paulo Ord. went higher to 172½, or 1½ points to the good. Central Uruguay Ord., on the other hand, dropped ½ to 73.

RUBBER SHARES IRREGULAR.

There was again a large accumulation of orders over the week-end in the Rubber Share market, but an easier tendency prevailed at the opening owing to profit-taking sales and the temporary unsettled condition of the commodity market, caused by news from Colombo of proposals to increase the exportable allowance on November 1 by 20 p.c. to 95 p.c. instead of by 10 p.c. Later in the day, however, a steadier tone became evident on the lack of official confirmation as to the extra 10 p.c. Price movements in the Share market made an irregular showing, for while a number of issues more than made good their early losses, others were still below the week-end quotation at the close of business. Anglo-Sumatra were a good spot, and here an improvement of 1s. 3d. was recorded to 103s. 9d. Java Amalgamated also went forward to 49s. 9d., or 1s. 6d. higher, while Kapar Para at 78s. were 2s. 3d. better. Labu gained 1s. 3d. and Langat Sumatra 1s. 1½d., while Sekong closed 1s. up. Batu Tiga, on the other hand, finished substantially easier, the final figure of 74s. 4½d. being 2s. 10½d. down. General Ceylon shed 1s. and Golden Hope 10½d., while Kuala Muda were 1s. lower at 41s. 9d. Malacca eased to 95s., and Manchester N.B. to 43s. 6d., while Mooply Valley at 50s. were 1s. 3d. down. Rubber Estates of Johore were an exceptionally weak spot, the final figure of 34s. 4½d. being 3s. 6d. below the week-end level. Sendayan were also lower, being 2s. 4½d. down at 56s. 7½d. Sialang lost 1s. 9d., while Tali Ayer, Tandjong, and Tandjong Malim were all 9d. down. Abaco shed 2s. 3d. and Baru 1s. Ratanui were a dull spot, and here a decline of 3s. was recorded. There were many smaller losses.

OIL SHARES LOWER.

Although the Oil Share market made a satisfactory start yesterday with business on a fair scale and interest spread over a wider field than of late, the tendency in most directions became dull in the afternoon, and at the close prices, with few exceptions, showed declines. An outstanding feature was provided by British Controlled. These shares came into strong request right from the start, option-buying on the part of a financial group being reported, and it being estimated that transactions of this character ran into about 75,000 shares. Nothing of a definite character transpired to account for the revival of interest, no news of any fresh developments having reached the company's offices and the usual weekly return of production and shipments not yet being to hand. Among other Venezuelans, V.O.C. Holdings became a dull market, the shares being freely offered. Lago Petroleum shares were a firm market, rising 1s. to 22s. 3d.

TEA SHARES FIRM.

A firm tone characterised dealings in the Tea Share market yesterday, while a good business was put through. Price movements were numerous, and with a few small exceptions they were all in favour of holders. Amalgamated Estates gained ⅛ to 39⅞, while Assam Dooars gained 1¼ points to 37⅞. Assam Frontier New closed 1s. 10½d. higher, while Borelli at 83s. were 1s. 6d. to the good. Brahmapootra put on ¼, and Ceylon Plant ⅛. Cons. Tea and Lands continued a firm market, and here an improvement of ⅛ was recorded to 30⅞. Ceylon Prop. gained 2s. 1½d. and British Assam 1s. 10½d. Doolooogram closed 3s. 9d. above the week-end level, while Eastern Assam and Empire were 1s. 7½d. and 1s. 1½d. higher, respectively. Halem gained 2s. 3d. and Imperial 10½d., while Majuli at 63s. 9d. and Moabund at 62s. were 3s. and 2s. higher, respectively. Jorehaut put on 1s. 7½d., and Tea Corp. 1s. Tea Share Trust at 32s. were 2s. 10½d. up, while United Planters of Ceylon and Upper Assam were both 1s. 3d. to the good.

GOOD BUSINESS IN INDUSTRIALS.

As expected, dealers in the Miscellaneous and Industrial Markets were well occupied throughout yesterday with the volume of orders which had accumulated during the week-end besides the further flow of business during the day. Textiles were a buoyant market throughout on the prospects of a record cotton crop, and quite a feature among the lower priced issues was a persistent demand for Amalgamated Cottons, which closed no less than 1s. 4½d. better on balance at 9s. 4½d., business taking place up to 9s. 6d. Sewing Cottons continued in request and further advanced to 2⅞, or ⅞ better. Fine Spinners rose 2s. to 52s., and Joshua Hoyles 1s. to 29s. 6d. Bleachers and Bradford Dyers returned to favour, both showing recoveries on the day, Bleachers closing 1s. better at 75s. 6d. and Bradford Dyers rising 1s. 6d. to 95s. Silk Shares showed up well. A very large business was recorded at up to 7⅛ in Courtaulds. Wardle and Davenports found good support, which left them ⅛ up at 4, while American Cellulose rose to 15⅜. Land Shares displayed firmness. Apart from Godfrey Phillips, which were not so good at 3⅞, Tobaccos ruled firm.

Dunlops provided the main feature of the Miscellaneous Trading list for in response to renewed support on interim dividend talk they left off 1s. better at 26s. 7½d. Parent Trust Deferred improved to 1⅞, African and Eastern recovered 6d. to 28s., while Match Shares displayed strength, Bryant and Mays rising 1s. to 51s. 6d., and Swedish Match issues both putting on ⅛ to 11⅞. Novocretes came into demand and rallied to 27s. 6d. Firmness characteried the Newpaper section. Motor Shares were described as blazing. Dennis Bros. led the way and rose to £3, or 2s. better on the day, bonus talk helping the movement. Rovers showed a similar improvement at 12s. 6d., Humbers gained 1s. at 2⅛, and Napiers 6d. at 38s. Crossleys were a feature at 6s. 6d., and S.T.D. Preference rose to 11s. 3d. Renewed support was forthcoming for Iron and Coal issues, the maintenance of the Babcock Wilcox interim dividend helping sentiment, and moderate gains were frequent. A feature among Canadian Americans was a renewed demand for Brazil Tractions, which put on 3 to 78⅛. The Wireless group was quiet, though there was a fair demand for Burndept issues, the Preference changing hands up to 21s. 6d.

Watney Deferred met with fresh support, which carried the price to the new high record of 382½, another seven points up. Elsewhere in Breweries Guinness continued in request, finishing 30 points better at 730, while Bass Ratcliffe Preferences rose 1 to 86½. City of Londons receded to 3⅝, or ⅛ down. Maypole Deferred rallied to 6s. 9d., and Crosse and Blackwells advanced to 4s. Lipton were steadier. Spillers Milling Deferred were an active spot, business taking place up to 14s. Exceptionally, Bovril Deferred shed 3d. to 43s. 6d. Apollinaris responded to fresh support, rising 3d. to 9s. 9d.

DUBLIN PRICE CHANGES.

GUINNESS AND COURTAULDS RISING. BANKS AND RAILS IRREGULAR. DUNLOP RUBBERS GOOD.

Government National 5 per cent. Loan rose ⅛ to 95⅞, and Compensation 5 per cent. repeated 92⅛.

In British Funds, Consols rose ⅛ to 55⅜, and Funding Loan ⅛ to 87⅛. War Loan 5 per cent. opened unchanged at 102½, but later eased to 102⅛. Irish Land 3 per cent. repeated 63⅛.

In Banks, Nationals rose ⅛ to 20⅛, and Royals, at the later session, ⅛ to 13 x.d., but Bank Stock closed nominally 1 lower at 271 to 273, and Provincials were called sellers at 22⅛, or ⅛ under last price.

In Breweries, etc., Guinness was rampant, and closed 2⅛ higher at 72⅛, after a huge business at 70, 71, 71⅛, ⅛, 72, 72⅛, ⅛. The Pref. repeated 11⅞. J. Power and Son Pref. eased 1½d. to 12s., and Dublin Distillers Pref. 6d. to 50s.

LONDON MINING MARKET ACTIVE.

GOOD CLASS SHARES IN DEMAND.

The Mining market was active, and good class shares were being freely bought. Kaffirs were somewhat overshadowed by the excitement elsewhere, but, even so, quite a respectable volume of trading was in progress, particularly as Johannesburg was more interested than for some time past. In the Rhodesian department, Cam and Motor stood out prominently a big demand being stimulated by the receipt of a cablegram reporting good development. Not only is the petrol lode showing up well, but at the 16th, or deepest level, the motor lode in the South stope drive, from the 528 foot winze at 110 feet, assays no less than £12 9s. over 60 inches. Chartered were not much in evidence and closed lower, and Tanks and Zams were content to maintain former levels. Bwana M'Kubwa were wanted, as were also other Northern Rhodesian shares. Paris was inclined to sell De Beers, and the price fell back, carrying with it Jagersfontein; but Consolidated Diamonds were a good market and higher, while other Diamonds were firm. With the metal still on the up grade—a further rise of 13s. 9d. to £274 13s. 9d. per ton was recorded—Tin descriptions were again extremely active. Hardly a share in the list escaped attention, and although considerable profit-taking was indulged in, quotations, with only three exceptions, finished higher. In the Copper group Tintos, on Paris buying, jumped up 10s., and Mount Lyell strengthened. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET.

DISCOUNTS QUIET.

Supplies of credit were curtailed by the usual Monday calling in of funds for balance sheet purposes, and short loans were in fair demand at 2½ to 2⅞ p.c. Old day-to-day money was renewed at 2⅞ to 3 p.c. and weekly fixtures at 3 p.c. Business was quiet in the discount market, the Continental demand for bills being less in evidence. Rates showed no material change, three months' commercial paper being quoted at 3½ to 3⅝ p.c. and four months' at 3⅝ p.c. The new Treasuries were offered at 3⅞ p.c.

Spot silver advanced ⅛d. to 33d. and forward ⅛d. to 32⅞d. per ounce on purchases by China in a market poorly supplied. Gold was unchanged at 84s. 11½d. per fine ounce. A moderate amount was available in the open market, a small proportion of which was taken by India, the balance being secured by the United States. The Bank of England sold £784,000 of bar gold.

French francs exhibited fresh weakness, the rate advancing fully three-quarters of a franc to over 105.80; but Belgian francs were better at 106⅝, thus lessening the premium on French currency. Lire and pesetas were worse. There was a recovery in Norwegian and Danish kroner, but alterations in other European exchanges were slight. The sterling dollar rate was unchanged at 4.84⅛. South American exchanges showed little fresh change, Uruguayan dollars being cheaper. The only movement of note in the Eastern exchanges was an improvement of ⅛ to 3s. 2⅛d. in the Shanghai rate.

BUENOS AYRES GREAT SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

To meet current outlay in connection with extensions, the provision of additional rolling stock and other essential improvements, the directors have decided to offer to the Ordinary and Preference Stockholders 291,000 6 per cent. Preference Shares of £10 each at par, convertible, when fully paid, into 6 per cent. Preference Stock, being the balance of capital authorised and not issued.

INTERNATIONAL TEA STORES.

We understand that it is proposed to issue the balance of the unissued 7 per cent. Cumulative "A" Preference Shares of the International Tea Company's Stores, Limited, during the week-end. The price of the issue is said to be 22s. 6d. per share, quite a reasonable figure seeing that business took place in the old shares on Friday at 24s. The authorised capital of the company is £1,950,000, divided up as follows:—£600,000 in 6 per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each, £500,000 in 7 per cent. Cumulative "A" Preferences of £1 each, £850,000 in Ordinary Shares of £1 each. All the 6 per cent. Cumulative Preference and Ordinary Shares have been issued, the latter being privately held. Of the £500,000 7 per cent. Cumulative "A" Preferences, however, only £250,000 have been issued, so that, with the proposed issue referred to above, the whole capital will have been issued.

RUBBER EXPORTS.

THE NEW PROPOSALS.

FURTHER DETAILS.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

COLOMBO, Monday.

According to further information regarding the Secretary of State's despatch to the Ceylon Government containing important proposals regarding rubber restriction, the despatch proposes the following scale of releases in the exportable maximum of the standard production:—

"When the average London price falls below 1s. 3d in any quarter the exportable maximum shall be decreased by 5 per cent. in the ensuing quarter; when it falls below 1s. 2d. the maximum shall be decreased by 10 per cent.; when it falls below 1s. 1d. the maximum shall be decreased by 15 per cent.; and when it falls below a shilling by 20 per cent.

"When the average London price is not less than 1s. 3d. the exportable maximum shall be increased by 5 per cent. in the ensuing quarter. If the London price is not less than 1s. 6d. the exportable maximum shall be increased by 10 per cent.; if not less than 1s. 9d. it shall be increased by 15 per cent.; if it is not less than 2s. by 20 per cent."

The Secretary of State asked the Ceylon Government to state its view whether the new scale, if adopted, should come into force on November 1st or February 1st. The Ceylon rubber interests generally have approved the proposals, and recommend that it should come into force on February 1st.

The proposals provide that when the 100 per cent. release has been reached the restriction should be automatically suspended until the price falls again below 1s. 3d. in any quarter, after which the new scale will come into operation. If Ceylon's recommendations are adopted, the exportable maximum will be 85 per cent. in the November to January quarter and 105 per cent. in the February quarter. The Secretary of State's decision is expected shortly.

COMPANY MEETING.

HEPPELLS LIMITED.

OFFER TO SHAREHOLDERS—30,940 ORDINARY SHARES AT PAR.

The first annual general meeting of Heppells Ltd. was held yesterday at 16 Grosvenor place, London, S.W.—Sir Alan Hutchings, K.B.E., Chairman of the company, presiding.

The directors' report and balance sheet having been taken as read,

The Chairman said—The trading profit and income for the period is £33,601 6s. 4d. The net profit before deduction of directors' fees, bank interest and depreciation, but charging to revenue £15,145 6s. 7d. in respect of advertising, is £24,518 18s. 1d. The average audited net profit for the three years and three months ended 31st March, 1923, shown in the prospectus was at the rate of £21,485 10s. 1d. per annum. After deduction of the charges first named and £800 for income tax reserve, the net profit remaining is £21,587 4s. 1d.

This net profit has been dealt with in the following manner:—There has been paid the Cumulative Preference dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum to 1st October, 1924, also the Cumulative Preference dividend at the same rate to 1st April, 1925, absorbing (including income tax) £9,001 1s. 6d.; there has been written off from this net profit £3,600 4s. 2d. in respect of underwriting and brokerage expenses, these expenses being, of course, non-recurring charges, and there remains £8,985 18s. 5d. available for distribution, out of which your Board recommends payment of a dividend of 7 per cent. on the Ordinary Shares for the period ended 30th April, 1925.

The assets stand at £296,956 9s. 1d., as against £272,665 12s. 6d., the prospectus net assets, representing an increase of £24,290 16s. 7d. The properties are set down at cost, but we are advised that certain of these, owing to the favourable terms upon which they were acquired, have an increased value. Cash investments, debtors and stocks are £131,790, against creditors, £22,346. The original vendor has thought fit to make a claim for interest on a portion of the purchase consideration, which is disputed. On the other hand, the company claims against him various amounts as being owing. It is intended to discharge the bank loan of £48,000 as soon as possible. Good-will value must have been increased by the expenditure of £15,145 6s. 7d. upon advertising, but your Board has decided to charge the whole amount to revenue account.

MORE LONDON BRANCHES AND EXTENSION TO RIVIERA.

There is considerable scope for increase in your business, particularly in the wholesale and manufacturing departments. Since the date of the public issue freehold works have been acquired, including six and a half acres of land. The ultimate effect will, it is believed, lessen the cost of production and increase the revenue by the manufacture of certain articles which have hitherto been purchased. The company is acquiring additional valuable leases favourably situated in the West End and other parts of London, and also other assets, for the purpose of adding to its pharmacies.

We are also co-operating in carrying on important branches in Paris, Nice and Monte Carlo. Those shareholders who travel to the Continent will realise the importance of these branches as supplying a long-felt want. Turnover and orders on hand since the date of the balance sheet have increased.

Your Board has decided to offer to all shareholders, in proportion to their respective holdings, the unissued Ordinary Shares of £1 each at par—a total of 30,940 shares—and application forms will be forwarded to-morrow to every shareholder. Those who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity should do so without delay. The extensions referred to will, we hope, benefit Ordinary shareholders by, in due course, increasing profits.

The report and accounts were unanimously adopted.

CITY OF DUBLIN ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

TRANSFER OF LIABILITIES.

A special meeting of the City of Dublin Assurance Collecting Society was held yesterday at 4 Upper O'Connell street, the Chairman being Mr. William McCarthy.

In order to conform to the requirements of the Government of Northern Ireland and the provisions of the Assurance Act, Northern Ireland, the following resolution was passed:

"That the City of Dublin Assurance Co., Ltd., having proposed to take over and accept transfer of the engagements of the City of Dublin Assurance Collecting Society, including the liability on foot of all policies issued by the Society, and to issue to every policy-holder in the Society in lieu of the policy or policies held by him or her a similar policy issued by the said company for the same amounts or value, or otherwise to become liable for the policy-holders of the Society for the amounts payable under their policies, and with the additional right to share in respect of such policy in all profits of the business of the said company on the terms that such Society shall transfer to and cause to be invested in the said company all propetry, money, and funds of the Society, we, the members of the City of Dublin Assurance Collecting Society, do, in pursuance of the power given by Section 71 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, hereby resolve and declare that we approve of and sanction the proposed transfer on the terms aforesaid."

Mexico has denounced the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation with Belgium, and the two Governments will undertake negotiations at an early date for the conclusion of a new treaty.

TIMBER FOR NEW HOUSES.

ARCHITECT'S EVIDENCE AT BELFAST INQUIRY.

AN ACCOUNTANT'S DISCOVERY.

Further evidence was given at the inquiry in Belfast yesterday into the Corporation's housing schemes. One of the witnesses, Mr. R. J. Caldwell, architect, stated that when he visited houses that were being built at Whiterock he saw timber which was "dozed" and worm-eaten. He took samples of it. Mr. A. H. Moore, an accountant, who prepared a report for the Corporation, expressed the opinion that there was no efficient check in the Housing Department of orders against accounts for timber.

TIMBER PRICES.

Mr. Dick, of Messrs. M'Cue, Dick and Co., was further examined. He gave details of beaded skirting used in the completed houses on the Oldpark site. It was quite simple for a quantity surveyor to estimate the amount of beaded skirting used in the houses. According to the Corporation books the amount delivered was 7,520 lineal feet, and charged at £52 12s. 6d. According to the quantity surveyors' (Messrs. Ferguson and M'Ilveen) return, the amount on the site, including the cutting loss, estimated at 5 per cent., was 5,000 feet.

The Commissioner—Is that the usual figure to allow for waste?

Witness—I don't know, sir. Messrs. Ferguson and M'Ilveen will tell that.

Mr. Babington—What is the proper price of that 5,000 feet?

Witness—£12 10s.

So that shows an overcharge of £40 12s. 7d.? Yes.

Over 321 per cent. overcharge on the actual value of the stuff required for the houses? Yes.

And on this one site for quantity alone there is an overcharge of over 50 per cent? Yes.

Coming to the double chamfered architraves on the same site, the books showed 12,872 lineal feet at £92 13s. 3d. The actual amount in the houses was 10,634 lineal feet, and the contract price £19 18s. 9d., or 2,238 lineal feet too much, and £72 14s. 6d. too much in money. On Stranmillis site the total beaded skirting used, according to the Corporation books, was 19,538 lineal feet, and the amount charged was £144 9s. 2d.

What quantity of beaded skirting was returned by the quantity surveyor as being in the houses? 12,220 feet, including the cutting loss.

And at the contract price of 5s., that makes a sum of £30 11s.? Yes.

So there was an overcharge of 7,318 lineal feet at £113 18s. 2d., almost 373 per cent. on the actual value of that required for the houses? Yes.

Giving figures for the double chamfered architraves used on the Stranmillis site, witness said the amount charged was £315 4s. 7d., and the value of that found by the quantity surveyors £46 12s.

MEASURING UP.

Robert Ferguson (Messrs. Ferguson and M'Ilveen) said that he had extensive experience in the erection of houses and was in the Government service for nine years with the Congested Districts Board in connection with land settlement. There were in that scheme about eight standard types of houses. At the request of Messrs. M'Cue and Dick he went to the Stranmillis site and measured up the beaded skirting and double-chamfered architraves. There were two types of houses at Stranmillis—one with bay window to the parlour and the other without. He measured up two houses on the site, one of each type. Having given the quantities of beaded skirting and architraves found, witness was proceeding to develop his evidence when a scene occurred.

A HEATED INCIDENT.

A large bookcase containing plans had been produced, and was placed before Mr. Lowry.

Mr. M'Cue, who sat next him, opened the case, when Mr. M'Cormick, Town Solicitor, rose from his seat facing counsel, and, coming between the witness and Mr. Lowry, stopped the examination by saying: "I beg your pardon," and taking the case of maps from Mr. M'Cue, handed it over to his own side of the table.

The Commissioner called Mr. M'Cormick to order.

Mr. M'Cormick—He has no right to be dabbling into my papers.

The Commissioner—You should not interfere here. Anything you want should be put through me.

Mr. M'Cormick made some remark which was inaudible at the Press table.

The Commissioner—You did it most aggressively. I can understand the word "aggressive" being raised here on your own behalf.

Mr. M'Cue—Sir, it was——

The Commissioner—Sit you down, too.

Mr. M'Cormick continued to stand.

The Commissioner—Do you intend to conduct yourself, Mr. M'Cormick, as a gentleman should?

Mr. M'Cormick—I intend to model my conduct on the conduct of the president.

The Town Solicitor then sat down and the incident closed.

ARCHITECT AND TIMBER.

Mr. R. J. Caldwell, architect, was the next witness. He said that he had attended some arbitration proceedings, at which Mr. M'Cue made reference to the quality of timber at Whiterock. It was said that the Board of Architects should be ashamed of that timber. As a result of that conversation, the witness went up to the site on the 10th June, and he then saw a lot of timber ready for use in the buildings. "It was," added witness, "a class of timber that I had not seen before, and I formed the opinion that it was not suitable for building construction."

What defects had the timber? Well, a large quantity of timber was "dozed"—worm holes, and other defects that you do not find in timber that is suitable for building.

Did you see any carpenters or joiners working on this? No, they were away. I went up in the evening.

Did you examine the timber in the houses themselves? I did. I walked through the houses.

What opinion did you form as to the timber in the houses? Well, I saw "dozed" timber used in portions of them—timber that should not have been put in.

And could you say from your view whether the use of that timber was general over the houses? Yes, it was general.

Did you make any tests of it? Yes, I tried it with my hand.

And what did you find? I found that portions of it could be pulled away.

Was that owing to decay? Yes, decay—dry rot.

Did you take any samples, or bring any samples of the timber with you? Yes, I took one or two pieces. I have not got them here.

Were they taken from the houses? Some from the timber on the site and some from the houses.

Can you produce them? If it is necessary I can.

The Commissioner—Leaving out the question of the timber, did you look at the houses generally, and did the contract seem to be carried out correctly—did the other workmanship on other branches of the material seem to be all right?

Witness—Yes, the brickwork was all right, and the slating appeared to be all right.

And the cement? I did not test that; but I could see nothing wrong. The only thing that I saw wrong was the timber. The timber was wrong. It was timber which should not have been used.

In answer to the Commissioner, the witness said that the Whiterock site was a good one; but he only particularly examined the timber, in consequence of the extraordinary account that he had heard concerning it at the arbitration.

DELIVERY OF CARGOES.

Mr. John McCann, a member of a firm of stevedores in Belfast, was then called in regard to cargoes discharged for Messrs. Robb. In 1923 Messrs. Robb got a cargo of timber, of which one-third was fourth quality. In 1924 there was another cargo, containing a large amount of fourth quality. The fourth quality was rotten, and, in discharging it, a number of deals were broken. These were left on the quay. The witness gave details of other cargoes, and stated that he saw fourth quality leaving Messrs. Robb's yards on vans. The witness discharged a steamer this year with unsorted timber for Messrs. Robb. Prior to 1923 fourth quality was usually imported in a small quantity. He had never seen half a cargo of fourth quality prior to that.

Replying to Mr. Pringle, K.C., the witness said that some of the timber, broken during the discharging, lay on the quay for a week. He had no books to show what cargoes he had discharged for Messrs. Robb.

Mr. M'Cann produced a sheet containing figures, which was handed to the Commissioner.

Mr. Pringle inquired from the witness where he had obtained the figures on it, and Mr. M'Cann replied, "from his head." The witness stated that he had no books for 1923, but he had a book for 1924 in regard to the cargoes discharged.

Mr. Pringle—Why did not you keep the books for 1923?—You never keep a book two years; I never thought this would be coming on. (Laughter.)

"SOME WINDY NIGHT."

David Rainey, a joiner, who was engaged at the Stranmillis and Oldpark sites, gave evidence about timber used there. He called the foreman's (Mackey) attention to the window frames, which were very bad. The witness was unwilling to use the timber, but Mackey said it would have to go in. The witness said that paint was thrown on the frames which were put in. "They'll hold for a year or so, and then some windy night they'll go," said the witness, whose description created laughter.

ACCOUNTANT'S EVIDENCE.

At the afternoon sitting, Mr. A. H. Moore (Messrs. Muir and Addy), accountant, gave evidence regarding the report which he had prepared for the Corporation. The delivery dockets of timber were, he said, allowed to accumulate for a month, when the pile was initialled. The witness stated that by that time the amounts were forgotten, and could not be checked. It was obvious that there was no efficient check in the Housing Department of orders against accounts for timber. There were very few items that were properly charged in every respect; only here and there would one find an exception that was rightly charged.

Mr. Swiney—Have you ever found an item undercharged?

Mr. Muir—I think I found one.

The inquiry was adjourned until to-day.

DUBLIN THEATRES.

PHYLLIS DARE AT THE GAIETY.

"The Street Singer" was presented to a very large audience in the Gaiety Theatre last night.

This musical comedy owed, perhaps, its greatest measure of success to the fact that the title rôle was filled by Phyllis Dare, whose charm as an actress quite captivated her audience. Into her character she infused a happy spirit and animation that give it personality, and her dancing, which was done with delightful abandon and light and graceful movement, was a feature of the performance that gave genuine pleasure, and won her generous applause. Her singing was delicate and effective.

Paul England was an excellent Bonni and a sympathetic partner, and Frank Steward, the Francois who hated women, contributed largely to the numerous amusing witticisms and fun which were woven through the work. With Daisy Elleston in a well-played part of Violette, the situation became more laughable.

Esme Fitzgibbon, as Marie, was a good study, and spoke her convictions with just the ascerbity that they required when pique aroused her jealousy. The interpretation of other parts was convincingly carried out by Henry Caine, Naylor Grimson, Phœbe Hodgson, Claude Horton, Ivan Agabeg, Dennis Brockbank, Cecily Jonas, Betty Aubrey, Phyllis McGloon and Adele Royle. The choruses were tuneful and rhythmic, and individual songs were rendered admirably.

THEATRE ROYAL.

The attraction at the Theatre Royal for this week is of scenes of a rather lively character strung together in the form of the ordinary revue, under the somewhat eccentric title of "Cheerio of 1925." Some of these scenes ran a little to the rugged side, but, on the whole, there is a good deal of fun. The stage settings are picturesque, and the Regent Band performance is a good and stirring one, which it is pleasant to hear.

The caste includes some admirable artists in song and dance, and the comedy element could scarcely be in better hands than in those of Murray Leslie, whose work throughout the show was followed last evening with keen interest. Two of the outstanding scenes are those which are concerned with the truth-telling ring and the photographer's studio. The St. Dennis Sisters, Tom Warden, Joe Lee, Arthur Cannon, Charles Jerome, and Ernie Allen contribute materially to the success of the piece, and the "Whiz Bang Girls" execute a variety of evolutions and dances which testify to their high training.

OLYMPIA THEATRE.

"The Dublin Revue," by John MacDonagh, provided good entertainment at the Olympia Theatre last night. Jimmy O'Dea was a very mirth-provoking country bumpkin in "Cabaret de Luxe," and was well supported by Fay Sargent. Dick Smith gave a very amusing version of "The Low-back Car," with many modern additions—improved and otherwise. "When You and I were Seventeen" (by Eily Murnaghan and the Lennox Girls) was a very pretty performance, with quaint old-fashioned dresses and scenery; while the last item, "Point Duty," with Jimmy O'Dea as the policeman, was the best on the programme.

Throughout the whole show the Shannon Scheme and other absorbing topics of the hour got a good deal of severe handling from the various artists.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

The play, "For Ireland's Liberty," by P. J. Bourke, is being performed at the Queen's Theatre this week. It deals with the victory of Rory O'Moore's army in the West during the Puritan Wars of 1641-1650, and is full of stirring moments, in battle and in romance.

There were large "houses" last night. Peter McCormac was of outstanding merit as the garrulous and amusing Shamus O'Toole. Other prominent actors were P. J. Bourke as Gilbert Harrison, P. J. Carolan as Owen Roe O'Neill, Louie Cameron as Nora O'Reegan, and May Fitzpatrick as Kathleen Ni Culhin.

DERRY ALDERMAN'S BEQUEST.

ALTERATIONS TO CHURCH.

Waterside Presbyterian Church, Londonderry, was re-opened on Sunday after undergoing extension and renovation costing £6,000, which have made it one of the finest churches in the city. The enlargement consists of the addition of two new transepts, each of which will provide 85 new sittings.

Through a bequest of the late Alderman James Harper, who was for many years one of the leading members of the congregation, the Kirk Session was enabled to provide funds for the extension without calling on the congregation to contribute. As a result of Mr. Harper's benefaction considerable sums have been devoted also to missions and towards providing an assistant and a deaconess for the church.

The members of the congregation decided to defray the cost of installing a pipe organ themselves; and upwards of £1,000 has been contributed for this purpose. The organ, ordered from Leeds, was complete and ready to be shipped across last week, but a strike in the organ building trade has stopped all work, with the result that the re-opening Service had to be conducted on Sunday without the new organ.

To commemorate Mr. Harper, a beautiful memorial window and a brass tablet have been erected in the church beside the pulpit. They were unveiled on Sunday by the Rev. Dr. Stuart, Senior Minister of Waterside Church for almost half a century.

FLIGHT OF THE GOLDEN DAYS.

BRASS AND IRON AGES COMING.

UNIVERSITY TRAINING AND BUSINESS.

In the course of an address upon "Universities and Business," which he delivered at a luncheon of the Advertising Club of Ulster yesterday, at which Sir Robert Baird presided, Mr. R. W. Livingstone, M.A., Vice-Chancellor of Queen's University, Belfast, said that a nation that relied on foreign markets was bound to find that foreign nations would increasingly try to manufacture for themselves; and this tendency would grow as their population grew, and as they became unable to support it by exporting raw materials.

THE RIGHT MEN.
WHERE WITS COUNT.

The golden days of the nineteenth century, the Vice-Chancellor said, were gone. The ages of brass and iron were before them. He did not think that that need make them pessimistic. No man, as had been said by Dr. Johnson, was ever written down except by himself; and no nation was ever put down but by itself. The more that people were put on their mettle, the more resourceful and formidable did they become. If they got the right men they would solve the problems. By the "right men," he meant men with force, not of character only, but of brain.

If they were dealing with a really complicated problem, it was wits that counted—quickness of mind, fertility in expedient, sureness of judgment, the power to foresee, to look into other men's minds, and judge their character and intentions from small indications; to estimate correctly the forces at work, and see which were shallow and noisy, which were deep and perennial currents. This was a work which could only be done by intelligence disciplined by experience.

UNIVERSITY TRAINING.

He frankly realised that there were many people whom no university training could ever fit for business. No doubt many university men—like non-university men—had failed. To succeed mere brains were not enough. A man must have energy, industry, commonsense. No university would ever make a stupid or lazy man, or one without character, into a success. What he did say was that there are, in every university, men who, from their (the business) point of view were worth "buying."

Proceeding, Dr. Livingstone referred to the fact that the War Trade Department during the War was under the control of two Oxford Dons appointed by Lord Robert Cecil, one of whom was a Professor of Economics and the other a Professor of History. It was their business to co-ordinate the conflicting views of different trade interests, and owing to the fact that they possessed trained minds they succeeded admirably.

THE TENDENCY OF TO-DAY.

He pointed out that at Harvard University in 1923 forty-seven per cent. of the freshmen were going into business, and year by year this was becoming more noticeable in their own universities, including Oxford and Cambridge. In addition to taking men from the universities, those controlling industries might with advantage encourage promising young men, after a year's experience in business, to attend university lectures for three years as matriculated or non-matriculated students.

From his experience at Oxford he thought that the best pupils were those who spent some time in business instead of coming straight from the schools. It was the tendency of business to employ university people in greater numbers, and he could not help thinking that this was the movement of the future.

In conclusion, he declared that those who had their feet in the past were in a dangerous position; those with their feet in the present were better off, but those with one foot in the present and one in the future were in the best position, and a university education helped to secure this position.

A vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Livingstone, on the motion of Mr. Archibald Scott, seconded by Mr. James Anderson.

CONDITION OF HOWTH ROADS.

NO RATES CAMPAIGN THREAT.

"We are six years dealing with certain roads, and the people are now going to get up a campaign not to pay rates," declared Miss Jane E. Keegan at a special meeting of the Howth Urban Council last night.

She further stated that over £15,000 had been spent on roads, and added, "It must have been spent on the Sutton road, as we got none of it."

A proposition by Councillor Geary, that the surveyor be instructed to carry out repairs to all the "pot-holes" on all the roads administered by the Council where they were in need of repairs was passed unanimously.

One of the councillors pointed out that they should confine themselves to their estimate of £1,500, as he believed that the Government in the next session of the Dail would deal with the whole question of roads and transport.

TOWARDS TEMPERANCE.

OUTCOME OF WORK OF FATHER MATHEW.

On the occasion of the anniversary celebration of the birth of Father Mathew, an oration on his life and work was delivered by the Very Rev. Father Thomas, O.S.F.C., at the Father Mathew Hall, Church street, Dublin, last night.

The rev. lecturer said that as an outcome of Father Mathew's work there was at the present day a sound temperance atmosphere pervading all classes of society. Although a sum altogether disproportionate to the wealth of the country was spent on drink in Ireland, yet the moral stain of drunkenness as a national stigma had virtually been wiped out. That was a triumph far surpassing any result that could be secured by the compulsory methods advocated by temperance fanatics.

The vote of thanks to Father Thomas was proposed by the Rev. Thomas Murphy, S.J., who described Father Mathew as one of the greatest and noblest figures of all history. It was due to him that the spirit of temperance was in the world to-day.

Old Woman's Home Raided.—At a Special Court at Carrigaholt, Patrick Hennessy, Ned Murphy and John O'Dwyer were charged with forcibly breaking into the house of an old woman, Mrs. Margaret Hanrahan, Carrigaholt, on Sunday night, October 4. Mrs. Hanrahan, who is over 80 years of age and a cripple, described the raid. In a corner of the bedroom the raiders found an old wooden box, where she kept clothes. They brought this outside and broke it open looking for money. When they got none they flung the clothes around the place. Accused were remanded in custody until the next District Court, bail being refused.

Armed Robbery Sequel.—There was a sequel to an armed robbery, which took place at the house of an old fisherman, Patrick Ronayne, Rathcoursey, Midleton, at a Special Court in Midleton, when William Butler was charged in connection with the affair. Sergeant Beirne asked for a remand to complete his investigations. His instructions were to oppose bail, but if Peace Commissioner Roche decided to grant them he asked that the sums be substantial. Asked if he had anything to say, the accused replied: "I am innocent of the whole lot." Bails were fixed, accused in £100, and two sureties of £50 each. Accused was released, to appear before the Justice at Midleton on Thursday.

Accused was ordered to give bail in £20 and two sureties of £10 each. Strabane Quarter Sessions. — Strabane Quarter Sessions were opened yesterday before Judge Linehan. There is an entry on the civil bill side of 195 cases. Of this number, 44 are defended and 151 undefended. Knox, Whitehead, was commissioned in the 3rd Battalion of the Rifles shortly after the outbreak of the war, got his line commission in 1918, but with effect from the previous year, and his captaincy in May of last year. He was twice wounded in the war.

Tyrone Lands.—Mary Quinn, Gortindarragh, Pomeroy, sued James Moyle, Garrison avenue, New Jersey, merchant, at Dungannon Quarter Sessions, to have a transfer of her lands in Tyrone to him set aside on the grounds that such transfer was procured by undue influence, fraud and misrepresentation of the defendant. When the case was called Mr. Basil M'Guckin said that his client had not turned up. Mr. W. F. M'Coy, who appeared for the defendant, said that, in view of the correspondence in his possession, it was not likely that she would turn up. Judge Linehan dismissed the case, with costs.

"A Common Informer."—"Then you come in as a common informer," remarked Colonel Howard, J.P., at the Dungannon Petty Sessions yesterday, when John Geling, Castlecaulfield, summoned Martha and Maggie Courtenay, of the same place, for cycling without lights. Complainant, when asked how he came to be prosecuting, said that he was a retired member of the R.U.C., and that the law was common to all, whereupon Colonel Howard made the above rejoinder. The Bench dismissed the case, and allowed each defendant 10s. 6d. costs.

Cattle Dealers at Law.—Judge Linehan delivered judgment at Dungannon Quarter Sessions in an action in which Samuel Smith, Dungannon and Belfast, cattle dealer, sued Patrick O'Neill, of Ann street, Dungannon, cattle dealer, for damages for the malicious and wrongful destruction of the boundary fence between the properties of the parties. The Judge, after inspecting the place, said that, although the defendant had erected a substantial fence, he had no right to go across the boundary and cut the hedge without the consent of the plaintiff. The plaintiff attached considerable importance to the shelter of the hedge, and he would give a decree under the title jurisdiction for £2 damages, with title costs and engineer's expenses.

THE SECRET OF GOOD DIGESTION

How Anybody Can Have It.

Practically all forms of indigestion and stomach trouble are due to or accompanied by an abnormal condition known as acidity, which causes fermentation and the formation of gas. Correct this condition, and all pain and distress instantly disappear. For this purpose the best thing known is to take a little Bisurated Magnesia. This instantly neutralises the acid, stops the fermention and formation of gas and permits painless normal digestion. Get a package of Bisurated Magnesia (tablets or powder) from your chemist to-day and take after eating or whenever pain is felt; you'll the astonished at the results—pain, distress, discomfort, and fulness all gone as if by magic. Nothing else relieves as quickly and surely as Bisurated Magnesia. Try it to-day.

TECHNICAL INSTRUCTION.

QUESTION OF ADVERTISING POSTS IN IRISH.

At a meeting of the County Dublin Technical Institute Committee, held at 11 Rutland square, Dublin, yesterday, Mrs. Sheehy Skeffington was elected Chairman of the Committee.

It was decided to communicate with the Department of Technical Instruction in the matter of starting classes in home nursing and invalid cooking in Rathfarnham, as a doctor from that neighbourhood had spoken of the difficulty in getting properly cooked food for patients treated in their own homes.

It was reported that the Balbriggan Library authorities had agreed to let the upper floor of their premises to the committee for commercial Irish and domestic economy classes at a rent of 15s. per week.

A vacancy existed on the staff for a teacher of Irish and commercial subjects. Only one of the applicants who responded to an advertisement was suitable, and she had since secured another post. It was decided to have a part-time teacher for commercial subjects, and to have the Irish classes taken by one of the present staff until the post had been filled.

A typist with a knowledge of Irish was required, as some of the teachers send in their reports in Irish. The matter of inserting an advertisement for this post in Irish only was discussed, some of the Council contending that suitable applications were more likely to be received if this were done, and others that the advertisement should be inserted in both English and Irish for the sake of outsiders who were interested in the committee's doings, but could not speak Irish. One member made the suggestion that it should be inserted in Irish in the Irish Times and in English in the Irish Independent.

Parish or Empire?

Yesterday the Vice-Chancellor of Belfast University, who has written a notable account of the Greek genius, gave an address to the Advertising Club of Ulster. Twenty years ago anybody who suggested an association between classical scholarship and the sale of linen or hardware would have been laughed out of court—brutally by the merchants and sneeringly by the dons. Now all the progressive peoples recognise the value of education in business. The Irish Free State is, perhaps, the only European country where to-day a public person can declare to an unsmiling assembly that a university education is "not necessarily" a disadvantage in the conduct of trade. Dr. Livingstone told the Belfast "publicity" men how the Great War had drafted the British universities into the service of the Empire. It was not merely their eager youth that flocked in magnificent thousands to the battlefield. The scholarship and culture of maturer minds were torn from their studies, were flung into the vast complexities of commercial and industrial affairs, and acquitted themselves in the new sphere with brilliant and complete success. The Vice-Chancellor urged the young business men of Ulster to become graduates of the Northern University or, at any rate, to make a wise division of their time between the office and the lecture room. In what way, then, do four years of university life and study help to fit a young man for trade and commerce? His visible laurels may be scanty—small Latin, less Greek and a stumbling knowledge of one or two modern languages—but he has gained other knowledge that defies exact analysis. He has learned to match himself with men; he has acquired a sense of proportion; his university training has put reason and emotion in their proper places for him; he has discovered that the world is bigger than Dublin or Belfast. It is the gifts of imagination, order and direction thus achieved which enable him at times of crisis to become the leader of men who, in the mere technique of business, have forgotten more than he ever knew.

Dr. Livingstone warned his audience that the old, comfortable, uncompetitive days of industry never would return. The hungry nations will fight a fierce battle of wits and energy for the trade of the world. For Belfast this warning is pointed by her half-empty shipyards and her half-idle looms. It is pointed for the Free State by her declining trade with England, where Canada is making an increasingly formidable attack on the Irish live-stock industry, and Denmark is ousting Irish bacon and butter by sheer superiority of business methods. The Supplement on Agriculture which we publish to-day reveals some part of the secret of Denmark's success, but we do not exhibit the Danes as an exact model for the citizens of the Irish Free State. It is true that the Free State must reform her whole policy of agricultural production, organisation and marketing, but her ambition must not stop there. Denmark is—and is content to be—a small, self-contained and exceedingly prosperous land of farmers. The Free State is a Dominion of an Empire whose stock forms nearly twenty per cent. of the white population of the world. In that vast arena Irishmen have played historic parts as pioneers, soldiers, statesmen and administrators; and opportunities of equal service and distinction are still before them. During recent years, however, our people seem to have been smitten with the disease of agoraphobia. Our governors and politicians are forgetting the value of our imperial inheritance and, in their parochial outlook, are committing not only an intellectual, but an economic offence, against their country. By depreciating consistently the imperial nexus they are weakening our moral hold upon the British market and are evolving a policy of insular protection that is crushing the people with new taxes. This narrow view is the outcome of prejudice and ignorance, and, if it is to be enlarged, the nation must turn to the universities. To them we must look for the vision, temper and initiative that will give us enlightened statesmen, will reform our vital industry from the top, and will recapture the British market for Irish cattle and the British Empire for Irish brains.

A New Dublin.

On Friday the period of grace granted by the Free State Government to owners of derelict sites in Sackville street, Dublin, wherein to set about the reconstruction of destroyed premises, will expire. Thereafter the City Commissioners will be empowered to sell by auction all sites on which reconstruction has not begun. Compensation awarded on the condition that rebuilding should begin within a stated space of time will be forfeited by site-owners whose plots are auctioned by the Commissioners, and they will receive merely the sums realised at the auction for the sites. Purchasers of the sites, however, will receive the compensation provided that they complete the new buildings within two years. Since only the owners of the site of the Gresham Hotel thus far have undertaken the work of rebuilding, most of the present site-holders stand in danger of losing both their claims on a frontage in Sackville street and the amounts awarded to them for their destroyed property, save in so far as the prospect of securing the compensation may raise the bids made for the sites by the new purchasers. The Government's stern attitude is open to criticism. Hesitation to rebuild owing to a depression in trade, of which they are not the authors, but the victims, should not deprive of the compensation to which equity entitles them those whom chance picked out to suffer from the destructive fires of a wanton conflict. While the site-owners ought to be fairly compensated, however, it was reasonable that a period should be set to their occupancy of derelict plots. The Government's zeal to promote the rebuilding of Dublin, if tempered by justice to all the interests concerned, cannot but make for progress. We hope to see equitable measures result in the speedy appearance of scaffolding throughout the expanse of the present wreckage, and, if adherence to the City Architect's plans for the new Upper Sackville street is imposed, Dublin may enjoy in one place at least something of the unity which gave distinction to the old Regent street and the present Rue de Rivoli.

The housing problem, although weighted with a gravity all its own, ought not to be dissociated from the question of general reconstruction. Next week will be observed as "Dublin Housing Week," and we are glad to learn that the organisers of this much-needed appeal to the public conscience will bring over to Ireland two noted experts in civic science. Captain Reiss, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Garden Cities and Town Planning Association, will tell the people of Dublin something at first hand of the means which have been found most effectual in Britain in moulding the growth of cities so as to yield health, convenience, profit and beauty. Mr. G. Topham Forrest, Chief Architect of the London County Council, will give practical advice derived from experience in the handling of London's slum districts and slum populations. The Housing Council hopes that the week's lectures and deliberations will lead to the formation of many new public utility societies of the type which built a whole colony of artisans' cottages at Fairview. Still more may we hope that a resolve will be formed among our citizens never to rest or to give the Government rest, until the slums are swept away. Speaking yesterday before the Dublin Rotary Club, Mr. Hector Hughes observed that progress in housing already had been so much accelerated in the Free State that, while three hundred houses a year were built in the first two decades of the century, building now was proceeding at the rate of 3,000 houses a year. It was pointed out by another speaker that of the 700,000 houses in the Free State, some 7,000 are estimated to become unfit for habitation every year. These figures indicate how far we are as yet even from the overtaking of wastage.

Bread Prices.

Last Friday the British Food Council issued an appeal for the names of bakers willing to sell bread in London at less than what then was the ruling price—9½d. the quartern loaf. Within a few hours the trade organisations lowered the standard price to ninepence. The price of flour also was brought down, and the Food Council is understood to hold that the reduction in the loaf is by no means sufficient. Even before the fall in the price of flour, or the Council's protest against the excessive price of 9½d. for the loaf, bread was being sold in rural districts near London at 8d. and 8½d. the quartern, while within the London area the Royal Arsenal Co-operative Society was able to sell bread at country prices. The Dublin housewife, reading these figures, well may envy her cousin in London even under conditions which the Food Council pronounced unjust. The price of bread in Dublin to-day is higher than it was in London a week ago. Bread prices have been reduced, and the 2lb. loaf is sold at 5½d. delivered, or 5d. over the counter. We are not told why it should cost a halfpenny to deliver a fivepenny article which is taken by every house; but the mystery is much less perplexing than the question why bread should cost 11d. in Dublin against 9d. or 8½d. in London. It is calculated by an expert in the economy of baking that when flour costs 50s. for the sack of 20 stone, it should be possible to retail bread profitably at 4½d. the 2lb. loaf; and to-day flour averages little over 40s. the sack. Means must be found to bring the prices of essential foods in Dublin down at least to the London level. The poor of our country justly may look to the Free State Government to protect them by means such as that adopted by the British Government in the setting up of the Food Council. Whoever is responsible—be it producers, transport workers or middlemen—for the fact that the bread of the Dublin poor is 2½d. the quartern dearer than the bread of the more prosperous people of London, has a grave charge to answer.

"The Lost World."

Annoyed by the contradictory comments of men of science on his "Outline of History," Mr. H. G. Wells has revised that interesting digest of modern knowledge, giving his own views only on the story of the earth and man. From the beginning of our globe—as he holds—in a flaring mass hurled off by the spinning sun, down to the remaking of modern Europe after the Great War, Mr. Wells will speak ex cathedra in the new edition of his work. In the first part, now published, we are given pictures and descriptions of the creatures which lived their monstrous lives in the Mesozoic age, before man was born—the Gigantosaurus, 100 feet from snout to tail; the hideous, horned Dinosaur which resembles a modern "tank," yet lived on grass; the Allosaurus, a scaly, flesh-eating beast which preyed upon its vegetarian forerunners. The interest which Mr. Wells and his readers find in these clumsy first efforts of Nature, and in that nightmare world of which some tradition seems to linger in ancient legends of dragons and inhuman giants, rendered one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's most ambitious books of fiction also one of his most popular. In "The Lost World," the novelist told, with a Verne-like blend of scientific zest and merry humour, a tale of adventures among survivors of the prehistoric species. This week the people of Dublin have the opportunity to see that remarkable story re-told by an even more remarkable film. Boys and girls will be taken to enjoy the gallantry of Professor Challenger—himself, apparently, a survival from the violent past—and to shudder at the cleverly-depicted creatures of the prime, struggling with one another, with conquering man and with the all-conquering volcanic forces of the earth. Science, which was the hobgoblin of our fathers, has become the entertainer of our children.

ABBEY THEATRE.

NEW PLAY BY MR. LENNOX ROBINSON.

The overcrowded state of the Abbey Theatre last night showed the interest taken in the first production of a new play by Mr. Lennox Robinson entitled "The White Blackbird." The audience saw a poor play splendidly produced and beautifully acted.

It is written in three acts, and, as far as dramatic interest is concerned, could have finished at the end of the first. By that the people had got the whole story of the Naynoe family, and had found it dull. Two more acts carried on the history, and although there was the usual first night call for the author, everyone must have been relieved to find that they had seen the last of a lot of impossible, colourless nonentities, to whose doings they had become completely indifferent.

There is a will and a law suit; a copper mine and a Swiss crevasse; a strong, silent man, whose strength is shown in bossing the members of a useless family; a courtesan from Spain, who loves one of them because he is a galopin, although there is nothing in the play except her word to make us suspect that he is more than a brainless fool, to say nothing of the utter scoundrel who will stop at nothing.

Some people will object to the creation of a situation in which an eighteen-year-old girl is placed with regard to her step-brother, but that is understandable if it were but a link in the working-out of a dramatic story. There is nothing dramatic in "The White Blackbird." There is nothing smart in the dialogue, and the one attempt at comedy is clumsy.

Miss Eileen Crowe and Mr. F. J. McCormick do their level best to make Connie and William live people with thoughts and emotions that count for anything, but the author is against them. The only finished drawing of a character in the play is that of Mr. Naynoe, which Mr. M. J. Dolan acts with delightful skill and ease. The others in the cast are Miss Lini Doran, Miss Ria Mooney, Miss Maeve McMurrough, Miss Shelah Richards and Mr. Arthur Shields.

Subsequently the audience enjoyed greatly the playing of Mr. Tony Quinn as John Claffey in Mr. Seumas O'Kelly's "Meadowsweet."

Dr. Larchet has added to the number of instruments in his popular Abbey orchestra, which was listened to with great pleasure in the largo from "The New World" symphony, the overture to "Hansel and Gretel," and other classical selections.

A FILM OF THE WEEK.

"THE LOST WORLD."

In a fine effort of imagination and constructive writing, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle brought monsters of the prehistoric world within the conception of novel readers. He imagined the existence, in an unexplored tract of South America, of a vast plateau where such monsters still lived, themselves cut off from access to the haunts of mankind, and their habitat unapproached by men until its discovery by a modern expedition. The author's skill as a novelist, supported as it was by his gift for putting scientific data to picturesque uses, was employed most happily in "The Lost World" in bringing into perspective beside the human figures of his tale gigantic forms of dinosaurs and other monsters of a past far beyond the ken of man.

It seems, however, that the clever author in imagining such a theme was providing material still better suited for the screen than for the written page. The producers of the film, which is being shown at the Metropole Cinema this week, have used the material well. There had, of course, to be a good deal of "faking," and sometimes the "faking" is not covered up perfectly; but eclipsing any slight flaw of technique is the success achieved—by what reach of ingenuity one is kept wondering continuously—in the representation of scenes so far beyond the range of experience.

Scenes in which the animal creation of an unremembered age is depicted are not the only parts of the film deserving praise. The story of the inception of Professor Challenger's expedition is well told, and the members of the party are characterised admirably. The part of Challenger himself is portrayed with great energy and originality by Wallace Beery, one of the most versatile of actors for the films. The concluding portion of the film, in which an escaped dinosaur is shown ravaging Central London, and finally smashing through the Tower Bridge into the waters of the Thames, is also a striking achievement.

What makes "The Lost World" an outstanding film, however, undoubtedly is its central portion, that which shows the remote plateau where animal life is supposed to have continued as it was, perhaps, ten millions of years or more ago. Allosaurus, brontosaurus, diplodocus, pterodactyl, trachodon, and other monsters are made to appear on the screen—moving across a landscape that is marvellous in itself; engaged in horrid conflict; striving among themselves for prey; and, finally, fleeing en masse before a terror greater than their own clumsy might, a vast volcanic upheaval. These scenes, made more vivid and raised above mere grotesqueness by the presence in them of the little group of human beings, in whose fate one has been interested by the earlier episodes, are worthy in their execution of the fine theme provided by the novelist.

LONDON LETTER.

PROGRESS AT LOCARNO.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

It was rumoured in diplomatic quarters this evening that events at Locarno continue to go well and that a further advance, though not of an official character, was made to-day by the removal of the difficulty regarding the entrance of Germany into the League of Nations. It is thought that the hesitancy of the Germans regarding this and other points is due to a lack of definite instructions from Berlin, but it is concluded that these now are coming through. In any event real progress has been made, and in official circles here great hopes are entertained regarding the possible results of the Conference.

The Rubber Market.

There was great surprise on the rubber market to-day when it was stated that proposals had been made by the Colonial Office modifying the output restriction scheme by an increase of 20 per cent. to 95 per cent. of standard production. Selling in the rubber market at once set in, while the share market was also affected for a time. Inquiry at the Colonial Office, however, revealed that there was no ground for the suggestion that decisions have been reached regarding rubber exportation. The Stevenson scheme, it was stated, is constantly under consideration, while confidential proposals of all kinds are a matter of frequent exchange between the Colonial Office and the East, but there has been no decision to change the restriction scheme.

Socialist Funds.

The discussion now taking place in the Conservative Party as to whether a Bill shall be introduced by the Government making the compulsory political levy by trade unions illegal is being watched with close attention by the Socialist leaders. There is little doubt that, should a Bill be carried on the lines that the trade unionist must declare his wish to contribute to the political funds instead of having, as is now necessary, to declare in writing that he has no desire to contribute, the Socialist Party will be denuded of a great portion of its resources. I understand that it is unlikely that such a Bill will be introduced; for Mr. Baldwin still strenuously opposes such a course.

Protecting the Nation.

The Home Secretary's reply to Mr. Ramsay Macdonald regarding the necessity of organising to protect the community from the effects of strikes is likely to prove extremely awkward for some members of the late Labour Government. The extremists are furious to learn that Mr. Arthur Henderson and Colonel Wedgwood had completed arrangements which probably would have gone a considerable way to nullify their preparations for a big strike. Both of these ex-Ministers are to be baited whenever they appear on a public platform and their political existence made most uncomfortable. The Communists and the extremists generally will see that these steps are taken, and they have a way of keeping their promises in connection with such matters.

Communism in France.

The Communist outbreak in France, with its twenty-four hours' strike, appears to have been a complete fiasco. The determination shown by the Government, with an accompanying display of force, created a marked impression in Paris, while the hesitation displayed by some workers during the early morning vanished when it was found that they could get to work safely. The railways and public services generally were able to carry on as usual, while only a small percentage of factory workers stopped work. In fact, the great feature of the failure has been the ignoring of the strike orders by the manual workers.

Cheaper Bread.

As a result of the efforts of the Food Council, it is expected that the price of bread will fall another halfpenny before the close of the month; for there are indications that the bakers are giving in everywhere. The Council has been bombarded with letters from the bakers anxious to appear on the proposed white list, as well as from the consumers, who are grateful for the reduction already secured. The Food Council, having dealt with the bread question, is now to turn its attention to milk, meat, fruit and vegetables, and it is fully expected that it will be able to secure sensible reductions in each of these foodstuffs.

The New Lord Mayor.

The new Lord Mayor of London, Sir William Pryke, a well-set-up man, who carried his seventy-eight years very lightly, was received by the Lord Chancellor at the House of Lords to-day to receive the royal approval of his appointment. In presenting the Lord Mayor-elect, Sir Ernest Wild said that "he was like Peter Pan at heart. Age cannot wither him. He is humorous, joyous and companionable." The little ceremony was ended by drinking from two enormous loving cups decorated with lilies of the valley. The Lord Mayor's Show will be an Empire pageant this year, and it is hoped to secure some of the most interesting features of the Empire Exhibition for inclusion. The Dominions are to be invited to send exhibits.

Silk Imported by Air.

Owing to Customs delays there is an increasing tendency for silk goods and other dutiable articles to be conveyed from the Continent to London by air. Consignments are frequently held up for some days at Dover or London when sent by the ordinary route, but the Customs station at Croydon air station deals expeditiously with all the incoming traffic from Paris, Brussels and other Continental capitals. The silk duties thus have operated to the benefit of the air services. There will be no further Sunday services to Paris during the winter months, and after the end of this month the passenger fare for the single journey between London and Paris is to be reduced from six guineas to five guineas, a reduced rate which will be in force until 28th February, 1926.

Electrical Trades' Demand.

No announcement has been made as to the result of the ballot recently taken in the electrical trades with regard to a demand for an increase of ten shillings a week, but it is understood that a large majority was obtained in support of the demand. It is not yet clear whether the trades unions concerned intend to take any action in the direction indicated, but negotiations have not yet been opened with the employers. It is not unusual in cases of this character for the unions to ballot their members in order to obtain a majority for any action they may be considering, but they sometimes think twice before making use of the authority with which they have been armed.

One Pound Notes.

Bank of England notes for one pound may conceivably come into circulation early in the new year, and, if they do, the change will create little excitement anywhere. The British public is now so used to paper money that there would probably be much grumbling if it were withdrawn. It is just under a century since the Bank of England made a pound note issue; for it was in December, 1825, that one of the greatest bank panics known in the country arose. The Bank of England was almost in extremity for gold supplies, and fell back on a quantity of one pound notes that had been withdrawn from circulation in 1821 and stored in its cellars. Issued for three months, the notes were readily accepted by the public, and the situation was saved.

NEW BUILDING SCHEMES IN DUBLIN.

SACKVILLE STREET'S FUTURE

£100,000 HOTEL TO BE BUILT IN GRAFTON STREET.

A HOUSING WEEK "PUSH."

The Central Housing Council, which is affiliated with the Civics Institute of Ireland, is promoting a Dublin Housing Week with the object of arousing the public to a sense of the urgent need for building houses for the working classes. It is hoped by means of public meetings and conferences, at which the best methods of dealing with the housing problem will be discussed and studied to awake the public conscience in this matter, to assist in the formation of public utility societies, and to raise money for existing housing schemes.

The Dublin Housing Week will open on October 18th and close on the 24th. On the opening day the attention of Church congregations will be drawn to the project, and an appeal made for their support. A mass meeting will be held at the Mansion House on the following evening, when the Rev. D. H. Hall, who has done so much as a pioneer of housing reform in Dublin, will preside.

Mr. Hector Hughes addressed the Rotary Club at Clery's Restaurant, Dublin, yesterday, on "Housing and the Rent Restriction Laws," and an interesting discussion followed.

Owners of interests in the sites of destroyed buildings in Upper Sackville Street, Dublin, have until Friday next to decide upon the work of reconstruction. After that date the Local Government Board will have power to make an order directing that the Corporation may sell by public auction all or any of the interests in the sites or buildings where reconstruction has not begun or where a decision to build has not been made.

It was announced in Dublin yesterday that Messrs. Mitchell, caterers, have decided to build a first-class hotel in Grafton Street at a total cost of £100,000.

£100,000 HOTEL IN GRAFTON STREET.

DUBLIN CATERERS' PLAN DISCLOSED.

Plans for a £100,000 hotel in Grafton Street were referred to at the licensing sessions in Dublin yesterday.

It was stated that Messrs. Mitchell, caterers and restaurateurs, finding that their premises were not sufficiently large for their requirements, intended to change the character, take in the premises of Messrs. Morgan, hatters, and build a first-class hotel.

The hotel would involve a preliminary expenditure of £40,000, and, when completed, would cost £100,000. It would be a five-storey building, with a 48-foot frontage on the street and a depth of 168 feet to the rear. At first Messrs. Mitchell's would have 30 bedrooms, and later 25 or 30 additional bedrooms, and hot and cold water would be laid on all over the premises.

An expenditure of this kind, it was pointed out, would not be undertaken without a prospect of its being profitable, and, of course, a hotel licence would be necessary in order to supply people staying at the hotel.

The firm's application for a new seven days' licence in respect of the premises 9, 10 and 11 Grafton street was refused by Judge Dromgoole as being premature, but his lordship expressed his good-will towards the scheme.

THE PROGRAMME.

AROUSING PUBLIC OPINION.

Among the speakers at the Mansion House meeting will be Captain R. Reiss, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Gardencities and Town Planning Association, and Senator J. T. O'Farrell. On Tuesday a meeting will be held in the Town Hall, Kingstown, when Mr. Devitt, Chairman of the Urban Council, will preside. Captain Reiss will also address this meeting on the housing question. On Wednesday a public meeting will be held at Arcadia, Bray, which will be addressed by the Rev. R. M. Gwynn, T.C.D. A women's meeting will be held at 42 Dawson street on Thursday, and the speakers will be Mr. John Good and Mr. T. Irwin. On Friday a meeting will be held at Rathmines Town Hall, when Mr. G. Topham Forrest, Chief Architect to the London County Council, will give a lantern lecture on London's housing problem and how it is being solved.

In addition to these public meetings conferences will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday mornings at 11 o'clock at 42 Dawson street, with the view of giving all persons interested in the subject an opportunity of discussing the difficulties of the housing problem in all its aspects.

UTILITY SOCIETIES.

During the entire Housing Week an exhibition will remain open at 42 Dawson Street, at which illustrations will be shown of the tenement house as it is, and as it ought to be, with maps and plans. The Council hopes that the Housing Week will produce a permanent impression upon the public mind, and that it will lead to the inauguration of more utility societies on the lines of those that have been founded by the Rev. D. H. Hall. With the loans that are being offered by the Government and the Borough Commissioners, in aid of house-building, it is expected that the work will take a more active and extended form than it has hitherto done. With the object of raising funds to carry out the programme, a Shakespeare night will be given at Nightingale Hall, Clyde road, on November 3rd.

The Dublin Rotary Club will take an active part in promoting the success of Housing Week.

ROTARY CLUB DISCUSSION.

Mr. J. Walter Beckett presided at the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday, when Mr. Hector Hughes spoke on the housing question.

Mr. Hughes said that the housing problem was very much bigger than any mere question of rent restriction, which only touched the fringe of the problem. Nevertheless, the forthcoming expiry of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest Restrictions Act, 1925, would raise afresh the very serious question as to whether it should be renewed in its present, or in some other form. The problem was how to provide a supply of hygienic houses equal to the needs of the people at rents which they could be reasonably expected to pay. It would involve difficult questions of social economics, such as building costs, rates of wages, and the standard of living. The legislative restrictions on rent increases and evictions merely stabilised rents and residence for a static population. They made no provision for growth of population, and, therefore, it was clear that they were at best merely a palliative, and not a solution of the problem. Tenants called for a continuation of the restrictions on the grounds that the house shortage still continues; that the cost of living had not yet fallen to the pre-war level, and that, therefore, to deprive them of legislative protection against eviction and unduly increased rents would be unjust. Landlords, on the other hand, opposed the renewal of this legislation on the ground that it was not designed as a solution of the housing problem, but as a special effort to meet an emergency which had passed—that the cost of living and standards of wages had now approximated to the present standards of rents, and that there remained no more adequate reason for restraints upon freedom of contract between landlords and tenants than between any other contracting parties.

RIVAL CLAIMS.

The elements of truth in these rival claims must be sifted, in order to determine fully whether this type of legislation should be continued or not. When that was done it would be seen that the housing question was a bigger and less transient one than this legislation contemplated; that the standard of rents had approximated more or less to the standard of wages, but it had not levelled up the increased building costs. The problem would then become one of artificially encouraging builders to supply the demand for houses, and, meanwhile, protecting tenants, without injustice to landlords, and providing for an ultimate return to freedom of contract. In most European countries, including Ireland, long before 1914, the housing shortage had become a permanent social problem, and these countries had dealt with it by Rent Restriction Acts.

Mr. Hughes quoted statistics to show the drift of population from rural to urban centres, and the failure of private building to keep pace with the increased urban population, which resulted in overcrowding and slums, not only in Dublin, but in England and various Continental countries, and the diminution in private building from 1914 onward during the European war, which further congested towns and cities. The Rent Restriction Acts in all these countries did not solve the problem of house shortage,

STRIKE MENACE IN ENGLAND.

HOME SECRETARY'S PLANS.

Sir W. Joynson Hicks, the British Home Secretary, addressing a meeting at Greenwich (London) last night, said that the main agencies for regaining trade were peace abroad, economy at home, and conference between employer and employed.

The Government was toiling unceasingly to re-establish peace in Europe; the Cabinet Committee, under the chairmanship of the Premier, would probably meet this week to go into all Government expenditure, with a determined effort consistent with efficiency and economy. They wanted to set an example to the great spending departments of the Local Government, county councils, borough councils, guardians, etc.

Regarding relations between employers and employed, he said that he had a document on strike strategy issued quite recently by the Russians, pointing out that a strike must be undertaken with the idea that it would develop, sooner or later, into military action.

What would have happened in the event of a great strike, such as that which was threatened in August, and what would have been said of the Government if, within a week, there was no food in Greenwich, no movement of trade in the North of England, and no coal for the great industries?

While it was certainly not the duty of the Government to take part in strike-breaking, or to form any forces whatever to break a strike, it was the bounden duty of the Government to protect the community.

Mentioning that a colleague in the House of Commons had written him a very violent letter, stating "you are doing nothing," Sir William Joynson Hicks said, "I tell you, as the man responsible for the organisation, that the Government organisation for maintaining the supplies of the country is in existence today in every corner of the land, and I tell you, with a full sense of responsibility as the Minister responsible, that I am satisfied with that organisation."

Replying to the attacks made upon him in connection with the O.M.S., the Home Secretary said that Sir John Simon had accused him of full blooded bombast. "That, at any rate," he commented, "was better than anaemic pomposity."

Neither the Government nor O.M.S. would take the smallest part in strike disputes or in strike breaking.

LEVERHULME ART TREASURES.

THE EARL OF MAYO'S APPLICATION.

An application was made, before Mr. Justice Finlay, in Chambers, in London, yesterday, by Mr. Robert Fortune, on behalf of the Earl of Mayo, to restrain Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley, auctioneers, until the trial of the action, from sending or taking away, or assisting in the sale outside Great Britain of the art collection of the late Lord Leverhulme at The Hill, Hampstead Heath. The collection consists of famous pictures, antiques, porcelain and other treasures.

His Lordship declined to make any order.

SEAMEN'S STRIKE ENDING.

UNION ADVISES RETURN TO WORK.

Mr. E. Shinwell, Secretary of the Marine Workers' Union, stated yesterday that a telegram had been received from the seamen on strike in South Africa, intimating the terms of return to work, and announcing that they should accept them. The Marine Workers' Union had replied advising acceptance and a resumption of work.

During the week-end a meeting of representatives from all the ports was held, and reports were received of the decisions of mass meetings in the ports. It was reported that some ports were in favour of resumption, but others, by a large majority, were against resumption; but, in view of a majority in the country being in favour of terminating the dispute, it was decided to make arrangements accordingly.

A meeting was held in London, but no decision has been reached, and it was decided to call a further mass meeting in London for the purpose of coming to a decision. It was expected that London will terminate the strike as well. In the meantime the Marine Workers' Union is in communication with the men in Australia.

The Marine Workers' Union, added Mr. Shinwell, was in communication with the Shipping Federation and individual companies in respect of certain matters for which they were asking for consideration. Some of these were that in future all transactions of the National Maritime Board shall be placed fully before the men, so as to prevent a recurrence of the troubles; a revision of the constitution of the Maritime Board, so that all seamen's unions shall be consulted, and also for a new method of engaging crews, so that a qualified seaman should have the opportunity of being employed without any conditions attaching; for example, asking that in future the employers should not decide to what union the men should belong.

They are also asking the shipowners not to penalise men by any form of victimisation. "Unless these proposals are considered these is bound to be a recurrence of the trouble," concluded Mr. Shinwell.

THE POSITION IN SYDNEY.

SYDNEY, Monday.

In response to advertisements, a steady stream of applicants are arriving at the shipping offices among whom are many strikers. Shipping circles anticipate that some of the ships which are now idle will sail shortly.

STEAMERS MUST BE MANNED.

BRISBANE, Monday.

Mr. Bruce, the Prime Minister, had an enthusiastic reception to-day from 3,000 persons at the Exhibition Hall. In the course of his speech he declared that the time had come when the steamers must be manned, and the Commonwealth could not allow its produce to rot on the wharves.

AWAITING CONFIRMATION.

CAPETOWN, Monday.

A curious position has arisen locally with regard to the shipping strike. The Durban strikers received a cable from the Marine Workers' Union stating that the strike in all ports had been declared off, but the Capetown strikers are awaiting direct confirmation from the Union.

ALL-NIGHT DANCES EVIL.

At all the Masses in St. Mel's Cathedral, Longford, last Sunday, the practise of holding all-night dances in the parish was denounced and strictly forbidden. It was stated that it was nearly impossible for the youth of either sex who attended Saturday all-night dances to fulfil their duty of going to Mass on Sunday.

The death occurred at Bath yesterday of one of its two centenarians, Mrs. Sarah Palmer, who celebrated her hundredth birthday three months ago.

IRELAND'S CRAZY BORDER.

NORTHERN M.P. ON DUPLICATION OF OFFICIALS.

FRANK SPEECHES IN LONDON.

THE FREE STATE'S FOREIGN CONTRACT POLICY.

THE special house dinner which was given at the Irish Club, London, last night, was the occasion for a frank interchange of opinion among the guests on matters affecting the Free State and Northern Ireland.

The Free State's acceptance of foreign tenders, to the exclusion of British firms, was severely criticised, and Lieutenant-Colonel Grant Morden, M.P., who presided, pointed out that if this policy was to continue, the bankers of Great Britain might find themselves compelled to retaliate.

"Trade between the two countries," declared Baron Ffrench, "must not be regarded as a one-sided affair."

A remarkable speech was made by Mr. George Henderson, Unionist member of the Northern Parliament. He thought that, for a small country like Ireland, two parliaments, with every department duplicated, and with a crazy border-line running across it, were not a solution for the common good.

IRISH CLUB DINNER.

SPEECHES BY BRITISH AND IRISH M.P.'S.

Among those present were:—General Sir George Mark McDonagh, Baron Ffrench, Sir John Curtis, Sir P. Stewart Bam, Sir Edward Bellingham, Mr. E. A. Harney, K.C., M.P.; Sir Bartley Dennis, K.C.; Colonel Barry, Mr. S. Pattinson, Father Tuohy, Captain O'Reilly, Mr. Samuel Geddes, hon. secretary; Dr. Lennane and Major Brannigan.

The Chairman, Lieutenant-Colonel Morden, who carried a shillelagh, which he said was an emblem not of strife but of authority, in proposing the toast of "The Free State Parliament of Ireland," said that the other Parliaments of the Empire might object to the wording of the toast, because all would claim to be free. In that club they were not political, but a gathering of Irish people of all opinions, political, religious, or otherwise, who met as friends. As such, however, they were quite free to offer criticism in the best interests of Ireland. That being so, he desired to call attention to the contracts offered by the Free State to Germany, France and Belgium, and to the fact that no opportunity was offered to England or America to contract for the work. If that were to go on they might expect to see the bankers of this country saying: "Great Britain takes ninety-seven per cent. of the exports of the Irish Free State. Why should we lend money when you give away your contracts to foreigners?" "To my mind," added the chairman, "it is a mistaken policy."

A MUTUAL ADVANTAGE.

Lord French, responding, said Ireland was one of England's best customers, over ninety per cent. of its imports coming from this country. Therefore, the question of trade between the two countries was a mutual advantage to each, and must not be considered as being a one-sided affair. He agreed that it was desirable that Ireland should stand well with English and American financial interests. But he believed that would come in time. At present the tendency was not to raise money outside of Ireland—"perhaps because we think we would not get it," he added amid laughter. He looked back on the progress made in the establishment of peace and security with the greatest satisfaction.

Sir Edward Bellingham, also responding, said that with regard to the contracts for the Shannon scheme, the Free State Government, in making its proposals to Germany, were of opinion that there was no electrical firm in England capable of carrying out the work. The only thing that could be said against the Irish Government was that the tenders were not asked for in regard to the Shannon scheme.

Mr. George Henderson, M.P., also responding, said he did not think anyone would pretend that the present solution of the Irish question was ideal. It might have been the only one possible hitherto, but he thought that for a small country like Ireland to have two Parliaments, with every department duplicated, and with a crazy border running across it, and a horde of officials on both sides of it costing more than they were worth, was not a solution which any Irishman, North or South, would consider to be for the common good of their country. (Cheers.) There was growing up in Ireland a new and better spirit of confidence and goodwill which, if continued, would gradually lead to a solution of their difficulties.

IRISHMEN AND EMPIRE.

Mr. E. A. Harney, M.P., proposing the toast of "Our Guests," referred to the work of Irishmen throughout the Empire, and said that it was curious how one could not go abroad without finding evidence everywhere of how much Ireland had done for the creation of the British Empire.

Sir P. Stewart Bam, responding, remarked that there was a better feeling in Ireland now than he had known for the past sixteen years. The thing for Irishmen to do now was to work together, and not quarrel, if they desired to see a happy and contented Ireland. They should not live in the past, but in the future. All were now Britishers, part of the British Commonwealth of Nations. They heard talk of a Republic, but where throughout the world would they find a finer Republic than that of the British Commonwealth of Nations, which was the envy of all the world, not even excluding America? He suggested one direction in which all Irishmen could work together. Why could Britishers go to the Continent to spend their money on holidays when there was such a gem as Ireland to be visited? His suggestion to them was to build better roads and hotels in Ireland, and so make that country the biggest tourist resort in the British Empire. (Cheers.)

PRELATE'S PROHIBITION OF DANCES.

QUEBEC, Monday.

Monsignor Lagneux, in a sermon here yesterday, stated that it was not true that since the death of Cardinal Begin the latter's decree against "lascivious dancing" had been repealed. The decree against the following dances—"The Camel Trot," "The Cheek to Cheek," and "The Bunny Hug"—still held good.

THREE MEN INJURED IN LLANELLY EXPLOSION.

An explosion at Morfa Engineering Works, Llanelly, yesterday, resulted in serious injuries to three men—Sidney Roberts, Thomas Hopkins and Phillip Beynon. While they were eating their lunch a brass casting, which was being heated, exploded and a huge piece of casting, weighing over three cwts., was hurled into the side of the building which the men occupied. The roof collapsed and the men sustained terrible head injuries. The piece of casting was found in a brick works two hundred yards away.

U.S. WAR SECRETARY RETIRING.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

It is reported that Mr. Weeks, the United States Secretary of War, is retiring.

Mr. Weeks had an interview with President Coolidge after his first visit to his office since the spring. On being questioned by Pressmen, all Mr. Weeks would say was that the assumption that he was retiring was a "fair guess."—(Reuter.)

THE DEPARTURE FROM DUBLIN.

The Irish National Pilgrimage to Rome to take part in the Holy Year celebrations left Westland row Station, Dublin, last night in two special trains, and crossed to Holyhead from Kingstown in a special steamer.

The pilgrims, who number 750, are being led by the Most Rev. Dr. Harty, Archbishop of Cashel, President of the Catholic Truth Society, which organised the pilgrimage. They expect to reach Rome on Friday evening next.

FAREWELL SERVICE.

MILITARY GUARD FOR PRESIDENT.

The pilgrims assembled in St. Andrew's Church, Westland row, at eight o'clock, half of the church having been apportioned to them, and, in presence of a congregation which numbered 2,000, the Most Rev. Dr. Byrne, Archbishop of Dublin, gave Solemn Benediction, assisted by the archbishops and bishops who are participating in the pilgrimage and the Rev. Thomas McNevin, of St. Andrew's.

The full choir, under Mr. Louis O'Brien, rendered the hymn, Veni Creator, and at the conclusion the whole congregation stood up and sang the hymn to St. Patrick.

Admirable order was maintained by the pilgrims—who were divided into two sections and officered by officials of the Catholic Truth Society—on leaving the church and entraining, and within ten minutes the whole party were seated in their trains ready to start. None but the friends of the pilgrims were allowed on the platforms.

Shortly after nine o'clock the first train steamed out of the station, to be followed shortly after by the second train, containing President and Mrs. Cosgrave, who are taking part in the pilgrimage, and the members of the Irish Hierarchy.

MILITARY GUARD OF HONOUR.

A guard of honour, led by an Army pipers' band, attended President Cosgrave on the departure platform, and while the President was making his farewells the band played. As the train started a salute was sounded by the loglers and the guard presented arms.

President and Mrs. Cosgrave occupied a special saloon carriage, in company with the Most Rev. Dr. Harty, Archbishop of Cashel; the Most Rev. Dr. O'Donnell, Archbishop of Armagh; Dr. Fogarty, Bishop of Killaloe; Dr. Hackett, Bishop of Waterford; Dr. Naughton, Bishop of Killala; Dr. Mulhern, Bishop of Dromore; Dr. MacNeely, Bishop of Raphoe; Dr. Keane, Bishop of Limerick; Dr. Dignam, Bishop of Clonfert.

ITINERARY.

The pilgrims will be conveyed by special trains and boats throughout. On arriving at Holyhead they will again entrain on two "specials," which will have a clear run through to Folkestone. Here another special boat will take them to Boulogne, where they will entrain for Paris.

A stop will be made in the French capital for a day and a night, when the party will proceed to Genoa, where a visit will be paid to Campo Santo, the death-place of Daniel O'Connell.

On Friday evening the pilgrims will arrive at the Holy City, where they will remain until Tuesday, 27th inst. During this time a special audience will be granted to the pilgrims by His Holiness the Pope.

The return journey is due to begin on Tuesday, 27th inst., and will be taken in leisurely stages with short stoppages, for visits at Pisa, Rapallo and Turin. The pilgrimage will arrive home on Saturday week, October 31st.

DEPARTURE FROM KINGSTOWN.

The Scotia was the special boat in waiting for the pilgrims at the Carlisle Pier, Kingstown. Mr. H. R. Banister, Catering Superintendent, came over from Holyhead to supervise the arrangements, which were carried out by Mr. Louis Owen and an active staff. For an hour before the main body of the pilgrims arrived small parties came aboard from various directions south of Dublin. The first train steamed in to the pier soon after nine o'clock, by which hour the crowd on the pier numbered several hundred persons. The second train arrived soon afterwards.

On their arrival President Cosgrave and the bishops were received by Mr. F. McDowell, Irish manager of the London Midland and Scottish Railway Company, and Captain Prichard, and conducted to the special saloons on the steamer. Everything was done to make the voyage to Holyhead comfortable for all the pilgrims, who expressed their appreciation of what had been done for them. Mr. McDowell's deputy, Mr. R. D. Roberts, accompanied the pilgrimage to Holyhead.

A great deal of credit was due also to Mr. H. P. Smith, the chief passenger clerk, who had worked hard for some months in order that the railway company's Irish arrangements should meet with every expectation.

The boat left at 9.30 p.m., when the crowd on the pier gave the departing pilgrims a hearty cheer, which was answered by those on board.

Mention should also be made of the work of Mr. Slattery, Kingstown, pier master.

Among the party on the Scotia were Senator and Mrs. Gogarty, Mr. Batt O'Connor, T.D.; Mr. and Mrs. Whelan, and Mr. Gerald McGann.

MISSING AMERICAN AIRMAN.

BODY FOUND IN A WOOD.

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Monday.

The body of Charles H. Ames, a pilot in the air mail service, who has been missing since he disappeared in a thick fog on the night of October 1st, was found by a boy yesterday in the dense growth of oak trees 150 yards below the crest of Nittany Mountain, Pennsylvania. His aeroplane was badly smashed, apparently by collision with the mountain.

Ames was hanging by his leather belt from the wrecked machine, with his frontal bone fractured. The scene of the accident was only a short distance from Bellefonte, where he was to have stopped at midnight for petrol.

Thousands of volunteers, 250 State troopers and twelve Army aeroplanes have been searching for Ames since a few days after his disappearance, but it was only yesterday that they began a systematic search in the heavily-wooded mountains. Ames was an Army pilot in the war, a pioneer of the air mail service and a former winner of the Pulitzer trophy. He was the holder of several speed records in the air mail service.

GIRL SHOP ASSISTANT ATTACKED.

A shop assistant, Annie Meleod, was admitted to the Royal Infirmary, Hull, last night, suffering from a wound on her head. It was reported that a man entered the shop while she was in charge, and struck her a blow with a hammer. Fortunately her injury was not a serious one. She was able to furnish the police with a description of her assailant, and the police are investigating the occurrence. Nothing was missing from the shop.

THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA.

COLON, Monday.

The discovery of America by Christopher Columbus was celebrated here to-day in front of the memorial to the famous explorer, the company including the Crown Prince, who presided over the proceedings, the Diplomatic Corps, and a number of well-known personages. The American and Argentine Ambassadors made speeches eulogising the Spanish Queen, Isabella, whose generosity had made it possible for Columbus to carry out his journey.—(Reuter.)

LATE NEWS.

PRODUCTION FOR EXPORT.

NATURAL SOLUTION OF A PROBLEM.

The Times, dealing in a leading article with the point made by the Prime Minister in his speech at Brighton last week, that one result of unemployment is that we are faced with a growing excess of imports which, if continued, will be a real danger to the economic stability of the country, observes:—If the explanation of the insufficient demand for British products is sought, there is no escape from the conclusion that it is because, when quality and prices are taken into consideration, the purchaser believes that it is more advantageous to buy the imported article. A voluntary preference such as Mr. Baldwin suggests would relieve the situation, but it would not help to increase the sale of British goods outside the Empire. On the other hand, if British goods in respect of quality and price could be offered on more advantageous terms than those of foreign countries, the solution of the problem would have been found in a natural way. While, therefore, in the present crisis every patriotic citizen can, at very slight individual cost, render great assistance to British trade by giving a voluntary preference to British goods, the complete solution of present economic difficulties is only to be found in a reduction in the level of prices to a competitive basis. In no conceivable circumstances will it be possible to supply from the resources of these islands all the nation's requirements in the form of food and raw materials, and, consequently, there is no escape from the necessity of selling the products of British industry abroad in sufficient volume to balance the account.

The activities of the Government in removing the causes of industrial depression are necessarily restricted. The restoration of the gold standard was a measure dictated by the need to reduce the level of prices to a competitive basis. If it does not have that effect the blame must lie at the door of those who by insisting on a fixed monetary standard of wages prevent the readjustment of prices that should in the natural course occur. In so doing they are as short-sighted as they are selfish, for a revival of trade on which the prosperity of the whole country depends can only be brought about by the restoration of the power to compete.

Even when it is admitted, however, that high taxation and a feeling of insecurity have led to lack of enterprise, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the business community to-day does not display the same virile qualities that were characteristic of former generations when this country was winning its place of supremacy in the commerce of the world.

BRITISH STEEL INDUSTRY.

THE SAFEGUARDING APPLICATION.

Although the Prime Minister has no public engagements until next week, when he receives the Freedom of the Grocers' Company on Wednesday and attends the Colchester Oyster Feast on Thursday, he is fully occupied with work at Downing street, says The Times. Yesterday morning he received a deputation from the Trades Union Conference with reference to the closing down of the Rosyth and Pembroke Dockyards, and promised to give the representations made to him his personal consideration. In the afternoon he attended a long meeting of the Civil Research Committee, which is inquiring into the condition and prospects of the iron and steel industry.

It will be recalled that an application on behalf of sections of the steel industry was made for protection against unfair foreign competition under the Safeguarding of Industries Scheme, but that the application was suspended in order that the whole position of the industry might be examined by the newly-constituted Civil Research Committee. That examination is now proceeding. It is not likely that the report of the Committee will be made public, though it will be laid before the Cabinet in order to assist Ministers in deciding on the safeguarding application.

DEATH OF LADY LANE MITCHELL.

The Times announces the death, which took place on Sunday at Rycotes, Culwich Common, of Lady Lane Mitchell, in her 65th year.

STOLEN JEWELS TO BE RETURNED.

NECKLACE VALUED AT 683,000 DOLLARS.

NEW YORK, Monday.

The police understand that arrangements have been made in underworld channels for the return of the famous Donahue jewels, which were stolen from Mrs. Woolworth Donahue, at the Hotel Plaza, on the night of September 30.

The hour for their return is said to have been tentatively fixed for one o'clock tomorrow afternoon, at an unnamed place in the city.

The police threaten to arrest the criminals if their identity is discovered. The jewels, which include a pearl necklace worth half a million dollars, are now said to be valued at 683,000 dollars.—(Reuter.)

LOW BARLEY PRICES.

DEMAND FOR TARIFFS.

Speaking at a meeting of barley-growers at Tullamore, Mr. P. J. Egan, T.D., said that it did not pay to grow barley at present prices; but barley-growing was only one of the unsatisfactory phases of agriculture at present. The most serious aspect of the matter was that the maltsters were only able to produce about three-quarters of the output of their maltings. That was mainly what had affected the price, and he was a good deal more concerned about being able to buy the surplus barley in the district than he was about the price, because the calculations showed them that there is 20 per cent. more barley in the country this year than last.

It often occurred to him that barley growers depended too much on the maltsters for a market. He thought, from his little knowledge of farming, that the grain could be used for feeding purposes instead of imported feeding stuffs. He thought farmers should grow more wheat, and that the beet sugar industry should be developed, because in the case of the latter farmers had an assured market and an assured price, and in that respect beet was different from any other crop grown.

Mr. Dan Kennedy, Abbeyleix, said that they should be paid a reasonable price for barley. They were offered 20s., and he had no hesitation in saying that the price was disgraceful. "Look," he said, "at the balance sheets presented by the liquor trade." The Department told the farmer to keep accounts; but he could tell the Department that it was better to keep no account books, because the biggest trouble was to keep accounts that were always on the wrong side. Never during the past sixty years had they experienced such a general depression, and the people responsible for that were their paternal Government.

Resolutions were passed asking Messrs. Guinness to fix the price of malt and malting barley to enable maltsters and corn merchants to pay 30s. a barrel as a minimum price, and recommending that an import duty of 5s. per cwt. be imposed on all barley and malt, entering the Saorstat, and that the minimum price for home-grown barley be 30s. per barrel.

"RED" STRIKE FAILURE.

FEW WORKERS OUT IN FRANCE.

STRIKER KILLED.

POLICEMEN INJURED: 80 ARRESTS.

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Monday.

As the events of Saturday foreshadowed, the general strike which the Communists attempted to call to-day has completely failed. At the hour of breakfast shoppings it was evident that the supply services of the city were entirely normal; there was not even sufficient disorganisation to enable shopkeepers to raise their prices.

A visit to a series of post offices showed that the full complement of officials was at work. On the outer boulevards a few persons of the working class were strolling about, but, if they were strikers, they were less numerous than the police detailed to watch them.

One big firm of engineers stated that they had less than 10 per cent. of absentees. The central district was normal, except for the passage of a cavalry patrol, while tramcars and omnibuses were even more frequent than usual in order to compensate for the scarcity of taxi-cabs.

In the city itself there were but few attempts at intimidation, necessitating less than a dozen arrests. At Saint Denis, however, which has a Communist local authority, there were more serious occurrences.

About 11 a.m. the police came into conflict with a body of strikers who were attempting to stop tramcars and motor cars and had begun to stone the drivers. The streets had to be cleared by truncheon charges, in the course of which the local police commissary was injured.

The trouble continued for almost an hour, during which the strikers succeeded in upsetting a number of carts loaded with goods. There were further serious attacks on the police during the afternoon, necessitating the despatch of reinforcements.

At Suresnes a workman was killed, but whether by the strikers or not has not yet been determined. Reports from the provinces show the strike there to have been practically non-existent.

A STRIKER SHOT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

In the provinces the strike was a feeble affair. The Mining and the Industrial Poire Department took the first prize, 35 per cent. of the workers downing tools.

The death-roll up to the present is one. Strikers were trying to force an entry into a factory at Suresnes, when mounted gendarmes rode up, and somebody fired a shot, whether at the strikers or the gendarmes is not clear. One striker, a mechanic by trade, fell dead.

During the scuffle M. Doriot, the Communist Deputy, kicked a police officer in the stomach, whereupon he was seized by the police, who handled him none too gently. His fellow-Deupties, MM. Cachin and Vaillant Couturier, visited him in the police station shortly afterwards, and decided that his case called for the attentions of a doctor, whom they summoned.

EIGHTY ARRESTS.

Official figures this evening showed that eighty arrests had been made in Paris and twenty in the suburbs, while sixteen policemen were injured. It may be remarked that no foreigners appear to have taken part in the disturbances, in spite of the intensive propaganda carried on among them by the Communists.

IRISH RECLUSE'S DEATH IN ENGLAND.

BODY BEING BROUGHT TO IRELAND.

The funeral of Mrs. Bridget Knight (65), the recluse, who died apparently penniless, but was found to have a hoard of money in her room, in Reform road, Maidenhead, was stopped yesterday.

The funeral had been fixed for 3 p.m. at Maidenhead, the arrangements having been made by the parish undertaker, but at noon the relieving officer received a telegram from Mr. Donovan, solicitor, Clonakilty, Co. Cork, requesting that the ceremony be stopped, and stated that he was on his way to take the body back to Ireland for burial.

After Mrs. Knight's death a corded box was found in her room, containing bundles of Treasury notes, bank notes, three bank books and two savings bank books, showing that she was worth about £2,600.

It was also found that she had been in receipt of an allowance, paid through solicitors at Clonakilty.

DECEASED WOMAN'S HISTORY.

An interview which our Clonakilty Correspondent had with Mr. P. W. O'Donovan, solicitor, yesterday served to establish the identity of the dead woman.

Mr. O'Donovan is not, as has been stated, a brother of the deceased woman, but has been her solicitor for the past twenty-seven years. Her name was Bridget Knight, and she was the only daughter of the late Patrick Donovan, Rosscarbery. Her mother's maiden name was Mary Hodnett, of Camas, Castlefreke.

Before 1907 she owned a farm at Lisduff, where she resided with her brother, John. In 1907 she sold the farm and went to Surrey, England, with her brother, who later died there. Her second brother, Denis, died, unmarried, twenty years ago, so that her next-of-kin are confined to first and second cousins, two of whom, Michael Donovan and Laurence Leary, Ardfield, left Clonakilty yesterday for England to convey the remains back to Clonakilty for burial there.

GOOD PROGRESS AT LOCARNO.

HOPES FOR SETTLEMENT.

CONCESSIONS TO THE GERMANS.

IRISH TIMES FOREIGN SERVICE.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

LOCARNO, Monday.

"If the solution of the security pact is not actually in sight, it is only lying just round the corner," I am confidentially informed. To-day's conference ended on a pronounced note of amicability and "pleasurable anticipation." The conciliatory spirit exhibited by the Allies concerning the Rhineland occupation, the evacuation of the Cologne zone, and the German point of view regarding the Saar, makes it possible to state that Germany's claims on these questions have been accepted in their broad lines, only a few points of friction remaining to be removed before the arrival at final agreement.

I am able to state on high authority that the Western questions, relating to the evacuation of the Cologne zone, the relief of the Rhineland from martial law and military courts, the removal of black troops, the reduction of the occupation force to a necessary minimum, have been tentatively esttled on their broad lines.

It is also rumoured that the plebiscite for the Saar Basin will be held in the near future, and that the civil government will be turned over to the nation winning the plebiscite. These matters have come up repeatedly at the recent private discussions as a basis upon which a bargain could be made.

The German Government is of opinion that the Security Agreements and the Treaty of Friendship with France calls for concessions in the Rhineland, as "natural consequences of such Treaty."

It has been pointed out to the Allies that could Herr Stresemann assure the German people that he had won amelioration on the conditions in the occupied territories, through what will certainly be regarded as minor concessions, for Germany's entry to the League, his bargain will be accepted, and acclaimed with joy throughout the nation.

On the other hand, should the German delegates let technicalities stand in the way of an agreement which would achieve so much for the "oppressed Rhineland," they would be unable to show their faces in Berlin.

The interview between M. Briand, Chancellor Luther and Herr Stresemann, which have been carried on in conection with the Locarno Conference, if not leading to real friendship between France and Germany, are certainly preparing the way for a lasting truce, based on fundamentals which may some day bring about an amicable co-operation.

INCREASED RAILWAY RATES.

POSITION OF CORK AND MUSKERRY LINE.

An explanation of the increased railway rates for the Cork and Muskerry and Donoughmore lines was given by the Secretary at an adjourned meeting of the Cork County Council, held in the Council Chamber in the Courthouse yesterday.

In 1913, he said, the railway was earning the whole amount of the guarantee, and paying full working expenses. After the war labour got high, and the expenses of the railway became very high, with the result that in 1916 an order was passed under which the Government guaranteed to take the 1913 year as the standard year, and to pay the difference between the working expenses of those lines and the actual cost. That continued to 1921, and the control period then expired. The following year was not so bad, as there was money received, portion of a three months' grant, but during the past couple of years the expenses, as compared with former years, became exceedingly high.

The payments made to the railway in respect of guarantee and loss of working for the period ending the 31st March, 1923, were £4,359 5s. 3d., and for the period ending the 31st December they were £6,549 18s. 4d., which latter sum had all to be provided for in the present year's rate.

"A VERY GOOD BARGAIN."

In addition to £6,549 18s. 4d. in the present year's levy, they had to provide for £4,823, which had to be paid to the Government under the Railway Act. The Government had to be paid as from the 1st January last that sum, and only a portion of that sum was chargeable to the Muskerry Railway, a small proportion of it. Anything less than a rate of 2s. 6d. in the £ would not wipe out the loss on the working and the guarantee interest, and it could not be spread over a number of years, but, taking everything into account, he thought it right to state that the Muskerry Railway particularly had got a very good bargain under the Railways Act.

Answering questions, the Secretary said that under the Amalgamation Act the full extent of the liability of the County Council was limited to £1,600 per year, but that was afterwards reduced, and the charge would be about £1,200 per year for the next ten years.

RABBIT COURSING.

£10 FINES AT EPSOM.

At Epsome Police Court yesterday, Alfred Cheeseman, of Kingston road, New Malden, and Arthur Hazell, jun., of St. John's road, Kingston road, New Malden, were summoned for causing unnecessary suffering to captive rabbits at Ewell on the 20th ult. by unreasonably causing them to be worried by dogs.

It was stated that thirty-one rabbits were liberated but not one got away. They were released sixty-one yards from the dogs. Seven turned round and ran straight into the dogs. One rabbit, not more than seven weeks old, was in a very weak and dazed condition, and went only five yards before being caught.

Cheeseman, in evidence, said that there was no difference between the coursing on this occasion and the coursing throughout the country.

The defendants were each fined £10, and had to pay between them three guineas costs.

A woman at the back of the Court shouted out—"It's a shame: it's a poor man's sport."

We are all prepared to do what we think good for the country, but we are not always ready to do the same for the man next door. —Sir W. Joynson-Hicks.

G.B.S. TILTS AT G.K.C.

AMUSING ELECTION SKIT.

A lively article by Mr. George Bernard Shaw appears in the Student Leader, a pamphlet issued by the Labour Club at Glasgow University, in support of Mr. Sidney Webb, the nominee for the Lord Rectorship.

Mr. Shaw, who has some typical tilts at the rival candidates, especially Mr. G. K. Chesterton, says that the real use of the Rectorial election is to enable the University to make a periodical gesture of insult to academic education. After referring to Parliamentary figureheads and distinguished scholars put up for the contest, G.B.S. speaks of "the rush and roar of derision with which the academic electorate boots the representative of enlightenment downstairs and into the gutter, and carries the politician shoulder-high to the Rectorial chair with shouts of triumph."

The Rector, he continues, thus becomes an abbot of misrule. If his constituents could not thus for once in a way let loose their intense hatred for the sham learning of the schools, they would go mad or burst. This time, however, the situation is complicated by the appearance in the field of three candidates.

"The Parliamentary one, Mr. Austen Chamberlain," he says, "is ideal for the purpose, and is certain to win hands down unless he unexpectedly betrays cultural interests and knowledge of other things than the party game before polling day. I call for three cheers for Mr. Austen Chamberlain.

"In wildest contrast to him stands Mr. Chesterton, who, by sheer literary force, has taken the position in London created in the 18th century by Dr. Johnson, and left vacant at his death until the accession of G.K.C. Chesterton's experience of what is technically called public life, is, as far as I know, limited to a single appearance as a juryman, but, in the true and general sense, he, by a prodigious sort of journalism, which is his bow to Ulysses, is, perhaps, the greatest publicist we possess. He began with a generous Liberalism, and was presently confronted with Socialism. But Socialism was neither magnanimous nor romantic enough for him. He repudiated it as an elephant might repudiate a set of toy chains, and re-invented it for himself as the distributive state—a more accurate and less pedantic term than the collectivist state, as the Socialists of his youthful day called it."

In a reference to Mr. Chesterton and the Church of Rome, Mr. Shaw says:—"Whenever I have been asked why, being so inveterately Catholic, I do not join the Church, I reply that the experiment of having two Popes was exhaustively tried in the fourteenth century, and was, in spite of the vaunted advantages of competition, on the whole, a ghastly failure, like Capitalism. Mr. Chesterton took that risk without hesitation, perhaps, because he was too modest to be conscious of his own inveterate pontificality, and through G.K.C.'s Weekly he hurls fifty two encyclicals a year from his Avignon in Buckinghamshire. To make him Rector of Glasgow University would, at the lowest, be a magnificent lark. One foresees the headlines—'Glasgow comes to Canossa,' etc."

"Sidney Webb, the tertium quid, is more unlike Chesterton than seems possible. Chesterton, by nature a modest, friendly, affable, unassuming soul, is, by sheer weight and stature and energy and gaiety, enormously pretentious, colossally self-assertive; all style—and such whacking style—and all art. Go to Chesterton for instruction, and he will most courteously impress you, persuade you, dazzle you, and delight you, until you are incapable of noticing that he had totally changed the subject.

If Webb, being in Glasgow, has business in Kelvingrove, he will walk thither prosaically or take a tram, and nobody will stare after him or be moved, as the spectators used to be moved, when Count D'Orsay used to stop, and say, "I beg your pardon, sir, but are you anybody in particular!" What is more, he will arrive there.

"Chesterton on the like errand would have an ecstatic crowd following him in two minutes, and would eventually reach Dalmarnock Bridge, at the other end of Glasgow, and forget all about Kelvingrove. Anyhow, he would not notice the difference. Chesterton would address two cornerboys, a woman and a baby, as if they were a grand demonstration in the St. Andrew's Hall. Webb would address the biggest demonstration as if he were telling the boots what to do with the luggage.

"People adore Chesterton's irrelevancies; Webb's efficiencies infuriate them. They invent affectionate stories of Chesterton's extravagancies; they revile Webb as a soulless instrument of precision. Chesterton's weaknesses encourage, Webb's powers humiliate, all the more unbearably because he cannot see why everyone should not be as clever as himself, and persists in behaving like an ordinary person."

In a tribute to Mr. Webb, Mr. Bernard Shaw says:—"Public life is mere porridge for breakfast to him. He is about the only man I ever met qualified to be a universal Alderman. Neither Chamberlain nor Chesterton would have a dog's chance if the Glasgow academic electorate were capable of taking in Webb's career, or if Webb could be induced to advertise effectively."

NORTHERN FARMERS' ALARM.

POSITION OF CLOGHER VALLEY RAILWAY.

If Tyrone did not back Fermanagh the Clogher Valley Railway would be knocked off from Fivemiletown to Maguiresbridge, was the complaint made at a meeting of the Murley branch of the Ulster Farmers' Union, held at Fivemiletown on Saturday.

A resolution was passed recording the concern with which the branch heard of the probability of a much heavier demand from the railway upon the ratepayers resident in the Clogher Valley guarantee area, due, it was believed, to the heavy falling-off in the receipts, especially for passengers and all goods traffic.

The resolution pointed out that the increased liability to the shareholders was an intolerable state of affairs, to which no small community of farmers could be expected to submit, and concluded by requesting the Tyrone and Fermanagh County Councils seriously to consider the position and do something to relieve them. It was further urged that the Government should be approached.

DERRY SESSIONS SURPRISE

REASONS FOR NATIONALIST AGENTS' ABSENCE.

When Derry Revision Sessions opened yesterday morning it was seen that the two Nationalist Registration agents were absent.

Mr. John Tracy, solicitor, who attended on behalf of the Nationalist Registration Association, said that he was likely to be the last Nationalist representative to appear at Revision Sessions in Derry.

It was learned later that the agents had been told that at the end of this Sessions there would be no further need for their services, as the farcical pretence was being kept up that Derry City will be transferred to the Free State. To safeguard their own interests in the event of being rendered unemployed, the agents demanded to have their insurance books stamped up to date so as to ensure that, when out of work, they would receive benefit. A misunderstanding in regard to this matter was, it is believed, the real reason for their absence.

When the Sessions resumed yesterday afternoon the Nationalist agents were present, an agreement in regard to the stamping of their unemployment insurance cards having been reached.

DERRY ELECTRICITY.

In order to utilise the spare generating plant and the electricity supply available through the closing down of the Londonderry shipyard, the City Electrical Engineer (Mr. Macrory) proposes the adoption of an alternative combined lighting, heating and cooking rate for private dwelling houses. By this means it is hoped to increase the revenue substantially, without involving any additional expenditure for services or meters.

Italian Customs duties of sugar are being doubled from to-day.

IRISH SETTLERS IN CANADA.

RAILWAY COMPANY'S MIGRATION PLANS.

ENORMOUS RESOURCES AWAITING EXPLOIT.

A development of passenger traffic between the Irish Free State and Canada was indicated as the aim of the Canadian Pacific Railway organisation, in the course of an "Irish Press Tour," arranged by the company. The "Tour" comprised a visit of Irish Press representatives to London, where the company has its European headquarters, and an inspection of the splendid show made by the Canadian Pacific at the British Empire Exhibition.

Sir George Maclaren Brown, European General Manager of the organisation, by whom the invitation had been issued, welcoed the visitors at a luncheon at the Hotel Metropole, London. The company included representatives of the Press of Canada, as well as principal officers of the European organisation of the Canadian Pacific Railway, among whom were Mr. H. G. Dring, European Passenger Manager, and his assistant, Mr. William Baird; Mr. Spencer L. Furniss, Chief Assistant to the European General Manager; Mr. T. H. Roberts, of the Department of Colonisation and Development; and Mr. Walter L. Payne, of the Publicity Department.

THE IRISH TRAFFIC.

COMPANY'S ARRANGEMENTS.

One day of the visit was devoted to inspection of the Canadian Pacific Pavilion at the British Empire Exhibition, under the guidance of Captain J. Duncan Cameron, who is in charge of the pavilion. The fine building containing the Dominion Government's display was also visited. The party returned to Ireland by one of the Canadian Pacific liners, the Montclare (a comfortable vessel of 16,500 tons), on which they travelled from Liverpool to Queenstown. The Montclare was on her ordinary voyage from Liverpool to Montreal, and made the Queenstown call in the ordinary course.

This year the Canadian Pacific Railway organisation has extended its arrangements for dealing with Irish traffic to and from Canada. The weekly call at Queenstown, instituted some time ago, has been maintained in both directions, and the westbound traffic has been increased to some extent through the co-operation of the Canadian Pacific Railway organisation in the movement for extension of tourist traffic in Ireland.

TYPE OF SETTLER WANTED.

The company's policy of development of the Middle and Western Provinces of Canada involves, of course, the rendering of all possible assistance to people in the Free State who desire to try their fortunes in Canada. The settlers most wanted are people accustomed to life on the land, and it is believed that many young people of that type in Ireland, desirous of making a new start in another land, will be glad to have information concerning the facilities offered in Canada. Inquiries from Ireland can be addressed to the representative of the Department of Colonisation and Development of the European Headquarters of the Canadian Pacific Railway in London. For dealing with actual traffic in the Irish Free State Mr. J. J. Hogan has been appointed the agent, with an office at Queenstown. It is largely with a view to requirements of migrants from the Irish Free State that special arrangements have been made for the conducting and assistance of Roman Catholics travelling to Canada. On the steamers there are sympathetic conductresses, and on arrival in Canada passengers find themselves in touch with representatives of Catholic organisations. A representative of Archbishop O'Leary, of Edmonton, Alberta, is in Ireland at present in the person of the Rev. J. William Gleeson, a native of Co. Tipperary, who has intimate knowledge of conditions in the area which is being developed. His advise is available by intending settlers and the parents of young people who may be thinking of Canada.

A SPARSE POPULATION.

In the mass of information concerning Canada which was acquired by the visitors on the "Irish Press Tour," the most striking single fact—made more striking by all that was said and shown of the vast natural resources of Canada— is that the population of the great Dominion still is less than ten millions. If from that number the industrial population of Ontorio and Quebec Provinces be deducted, the remaining figure indicates the sparseness of the population in the more westerly "Prairie" Provinces, and the existence still of vast fields for development. Even in areas where the greater part of the land available for immediate development has been taken into ownership, the extent of actual development at present is often no more than a scratching of the surface in comparison with the potentialities of those areas, given due resources of enterprise and energy.

How Canadians think their invitation should appeal to Irishmen was expressed by Captain Cameron in the course of his address to the Press visitors from the Free State at the Canadian Pacific Pavilion. "We have a vast country with large undeveloped natural resources and a sparse population," he said. "You have a population requiring expansion, well fitted by nature and training to develop new fields for the mutual benefit of those who come to us and those who remain behind. You have men of vitality and courage, characteristics which our climate and environment tend to accentuate. There are opportunities of reciprocal markets for your produce and ours. You are anxious for tourists to visit your own Green Isle: send your young men and women to us as colonists, and we will send them back as tourists."

ENCOURAGING DEVELOPMENT.

The offer of free grants of land by the Canadian Government remains in force, but it was gathered from representatives of the Canadian Pacific organisation that "homesteading," as the taking up of such sites is called, holds little of its former prospects, now that the only land remaining available on those terms as a rule is outside the boundaries of the area opened up by transportation and other facilities. To persons who are capable of managing a farm the company commends sites within its own "blocks" of land. These "blocks" were granted to the company in pursuance of the terms given by the Government for the completion of the railway across the Continent. They, of course, have been opened up by the company's services, which, besides transportation facilities, include in certain areas such matters as irrigation. To encourage development, from which a return in the form of increased traffic is expected in the future, the company offers sites, improved and unimproved, on a long-term amortisation plan that appears to afford attractive prospects for the settler. The sites available include land suitable for varied uses, from ranching to comparatively intensive farming; while there is always the possibility that their value may be enhanced enormously in the future through development of mineral resources or extension of industrial activity.

All who took part in the tour were impressed by the evidence afforded them of the magnitude of Canadian Pacific Railway organisation, with its 18,000 miles of railways, its fleets of liners engaged in regular services across two oceans, its land settlement plans covering territories many times the extent of the British Isles, and its general equipment for handling such traffic as, for instance, the wheat exports of Canada. The servants of that great organisation include many men of Irish blood, and among its customers, too—men who are doing well and handling big business in Canada—Irishmen are in good proportion. The company expects a large development in the near future of the connection between Canada and the Irish Free State.

FEIS CEOIL PROGRESS.

A CONCERT HALL FOR DUBLIN.

A concert hall for Dublin, ensemble singing, and the development of sight reading were amongst the subjects discussed by Mr. Edmond Lupton, K.C., at the annual meeting of the Feis Ceoil Association at 37 Molesworth street yesterday.

Last year, Mr. Lupton pointed out, they had initiated a movement for the collection of funds to build a proper concert hall for Dublin. They had now about £3,000 in cash or guarantees, but were at present at a standstill for funds. The guarantees were available for twelve months, and the committee were trying to have them renewed, and add to their number. If sufficient money for the building of the proposed hall became available, the form it would take was a matter to be determined by the people who gave the guarantees. The Feis Ceoil had been a great success, and it would be a still greater success if they had a proper hall.

Commenting on the annual report, Mr. Lupton alluded to the value of ensemble singing. He was glad that there had been an increase in the entries under this head. It was to be regretted that they had so few choirs. It was that kind of music that the Feis especially needed.

SIGHT READING.

One of the outstanding features of the report was the progress made by the children. So long as the children were showing the right spirit they could be sure of the success of the Association's work. Still there was room for the development of sight reading in the schools.

Mr. Lupton mentioned, in conclusion, that the Feis had closed the year with a balance of £173 16s. 7d., the biggest they had had since the Feis was formed.

The report, which was adopted, on the motion of Dr. Denham, seconded by Commendatore Esposito, showed that the total entries for the Feis had increased from 417 in 1897 to 949 in 1924, the greatest since it started, while this year they totalled 869. Mr. Reed, who adjudicated at this year's Feis, commended the playing of the string orchestras, while Dr. Blairstow expressed disappointment at the small number of choirs. Professor Granville Bantock declared that "At no other festival and in no other country have I heard so many real singers among all classes of competitors. The Feis is an institution of which Irishmen and women may feel proud; and so long as it stands for the highest ideals in music it will exercise not only a beneficent, but an encouraging influence upon the development of a truly national art and spirit." Mr. Reddie praised the work of the teachers. There were also reports from Mr. Arthur Darley and Professor Robert O'Dwyer.

The following officers were elected:—Hon. Sec.—Miss E. Mortier.— Hon. Treasurers—Captain H. M. FitzGibbon and Mr. A. A. Kelly. Hon. Solicitor—Captain Gerrard, M.B.E.

RELIEF WORK AT TRADE UNION WAGES.

PEMBROKE'S CALL TO THE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Brittain presided at last night's meeting of the Pembroke Urban District Council, when Mr. Nolan, who spoke of the unemployment in the district, proposed, and Mr. Day seconded, a resolution asking that the Government should initiate public works, at full trade union rates, as the situation constituted a national emergency.

The Chairman stated that he did not think that relief work should be paid for at trade union rates.

Mr. Maguire said that there were 200 men and 200 girls unemployed in the printing trade alone.

Mr. McEntee said that the Government should provide for the sustenance of those who were willing to work. Those who assumed Government responsibilities should try to keep the people at home. Through starvation they had lost more of their people during the last three years than during the previous ten or twelve years. It was less detrimental to give men a fair rate of wages for a day's work than to give them a demoralising dole.

Mrs. Walsh said that she questioned very much if the Government realised the position. Everyone had a moral right to live. There was a tremendous amount of unemployment in Dublin to-day, and they should do something to bring about a rectification. The cost of living was appalling, and they were talking of reducing the workers' wages.

The Chairman said that he doubted if the passing of such a resolution would do any good.

Mr. Day said that in the event of the Government not taking action some effort should be made to do so by the Council.

The resolution was carried.

A CENTRAL LIBRARY.

Arising out of correspondence with the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust regarding a proposed new library, it was pointed out that as the grant of £7,000 plus 10 per cent. could not be increased, one central library only could be built instead of one at Ringsend and one at Ballsbridge, as had been proposed.

Mr. Maguire said that he protested against Ringsend being deprived of a library, the erection of which had been stopped by the Great War.

A resolution was adopted, agreeing to the erection of one central library, and that Messrs. Kaye, Parry and Ross be appointed as architects.

Miss Marcella Lynch and Miss Mary Sweetman were appointed to fill two vacancies on the Maternity and Child Welfare Ladies' Committee.

IMPRISONMENT ORDERED.

PORTADOWN FARMER WHO MADE HIS OWN POTEEN.

"It was a very serious case, and they could not impose a less penalty than three months' imprisonment. They did not think that the case would be met in any way by a fine," said Mr. W. G. Moriarty, R.M., at a Licensing Court in Portadown, following the hearing of the evidence in a case in which James Boyd, a farmer, was prosecuted for keeping an illicit still on his premises in the townland of Derryaugh.

Defendant told the police when they raided the house and found the still in full working order "that he was only making a little poteen for himself," and District Inspector Andrews told the Court that he seemed to have "a little taken at the time."

Mr. R. M. Cullen, for the defence, said that his client had been given some poteen by people in the district, and owing to police activities the supplies had been cut off, and defendant purchased the apparatus found on the premises for the purpose of making a little poteen for himself.

Notice of appeal was given.

THE METHODIST CHURCH.

The Centenary Methodist Church is one of a considerable number which gives the entire proceeds of its Harvest Thanksgiving Services to the Home Mission department of the Church. Its Services of this year, which have just been held, were very successful, the offerings for Home Missions amounting to nearly £200. The Rev. John England and the Rev. R. Lee Cole, M.A., B.D., were the preachers at the Services on Sunday. At the musical festival on Monday evening, Mr. Anthony Cowdy, of Drogheda, in the unavoidable absence of Lady Anderson, C.B.E., of Londonderry, presided.

Rathmines and Rathgar churches also devote the Harvest Thanksgiving offerings to Home Missions, and their Services brought in another £160 for this important fund. The local ministers and the Rev. W. J. Oliver conducted the Sunday Services. In Charleston Road the Rev. R. Lee Cole, M.A., B.D., delivered his lecture, entitled "The Horseback Preachers of the Eighteenth Century." In Rathgar the Rev. J. Arthur Hynes, of Rathkeale, told the story of his work amongst the Palatines.

The Rev. Johnstone Hunter, of the North Belfast Mission, was the special preacher at the Anniversary Services on Sunday in Abbey Street, Church, Dublin.

DESPERATE ROADSIDE STRUGGLE.

SERGEANT OVERPOWERS GUNMAN.

A desperate road-side struggle with an armed man was described at a special Court in Howth yesterday, when Christopher Farnan, 4 St. Mary's place, Broadstone, was charged with attempted robbery at Howth Railway Station on last Saturday night, and remanded to the Dublin District Court.

Railway Porter Anderson, Howth Station, stated that on Saturday night at 11.15 he heard a noise, and on opening the parcels office door saw the accused, with a revolver in his hand and wearing a cap with two holes pulled down over his eyes. Accused demanded the keys of the safe, but he told him that he had not got them. Accused tried to open the safe, but failed. He took two overcoats and left, ordering witness not to stir for five minutes.

SECURED THE GUN.

Sergeant O'Reilly gave evidence of following the accused in the direction of Dublin. He caught up with him at Maryville. He jumped off the bicycle that he was riding and ordered the accused to do likewise. Knowing that the man was armed, he caught both his arms and questioned him.

"If I give you the gun," said the accused, "will you let me off?" Witness held on to both his arms. The accused than gave him a knee in the stomach, and witness knocked him down and rolled him on the ground. Farnan tried to use the revolver, and a struggle ensued, which lasted for half an hour. The accused caught witness by the mouth with his fingers, and witness, by biting accused's arm, got him to the channel and battered his head on the kerbstone. Witness secured the gun, and he made the accused put up his hands and walk to Raheny Station.

The revolver was a .45 Colt, and was loaded with three live bullets. Witness fired two shots to attract attention, but no one came to his assistance.

When charged with the offence the accused said: "I did it all right."

OFFICIALS' BONUS.

SUGGESTED ABOLITION IN THE NORTH.

Much interest was taken in a motion which came before the Fermanagh County Council for the abolition of all bonuses paid to officials and the revision of their salaries.

Mr. Hugh Kirkpatrick, J.P., whose motion it was, said that his idea was to get away from the bonus system, and to pay a man a fair salary. When they came to revise the salaries they would see, perhaps, that some were paid too well and would have to be reduced, while others would have to be increased.

Mr. Joseph Geddis, B.A., seconded.

Sir Basil Brooke agreed that something should be done to lower the rates. He would suggest that all the Northern Councils should be asked to take joint action in the matter, and send representatives to a joint conference. To adjust one county only would lead to confusion.

The Chairman (Mr. James Cooper, M.P.)—We had better let our own county stand as it is, by itself, as it would be found that in other counties the salaries were much higher than in Fermanagh.

Colonel Barton said that there was a basic salary and a sliding bonus, which was quite fair. To have an established salary would bind them for all time to an increase.

Mr. Stuart Verschoyle, D.L., said that if they could find another word for bonus they would solve the whole problem. (Hear, hear.) Some of their officials had saved the county five times the amount of their salaries.

In reply to Mr. Joseph Johnston, J.P., the Secretary said that, at any rate, the resolution could not touch the three best paid officials in the county—the tuberculosis officer, the County Surveyor and the Secretary. Further, they had made four recent appointments of assistant surveyors, and part of the conditions of their appointment was that they should get the bonus. Those could not be touched.

Mr. Anderson—And there is another point. If we take off the bonus and fix the salaries at an increased figure over the basic salary, will they be sanctioned?

Mr. W. J. Brown, J.P., urged that the proper thing to do would be to take tenders for the posts and give the jobs to the lowest, if fit.

Mr. Crozier, J.P.—Would you take tenders every year?

It was eventually agreed by a majority that the whole question of fixing a fair salary should be considered by the Finance Committee, which should bring in a report to the Council.

IRISH RAINFALL ASSOCIATION.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER, 1925.

September was generally damp, cloudy and cool, with a total rainfall slightly below normal. Light showers and drizzle were common, however, especially towards the end of the month, and the last few days were very dull and heavy, with much fog. In the early part there was a good deal of sunshine, but a change occurred about the 16th, when storms were reported at several stations. On the whole, the month may be described as moist and unsettled. Total rainfall at various stations:—

REPORTING OF SUICIDE CASES.

MANCHESTER CORONER'S DENUNCIATION.

The Manchester City Coroner at an inquest yesterday on a sixteen-year-old girl, who had taken her own life after many years' illness, made strong remarks on the publicity given to suicide cases. The mother of the girl appealed to him that the case should not be reported in the papers. The Coroner said that he had no power in that direction. His strong opinion was that the reporting of such cases led to other people doing the same thing. He hoped the day would come when it would be a crime for newspapers to report suicides. People who published these cases were undertaking a heavy responsibility. It was a crime to publish the details of such cases, added the Coroner.

Dr. A. E. Burroughs is the ninth Dean of Bristol who has been promoted thence to a bishopric. St. Augustine's Abbey became a cathedral in 1542, when the abbots and priors were succeeded by bishops and deans. The nine promoted deans have been:—Anthony Watson, to Chichester, 1596; Henry Glemham, to St. Asaph, 1667; William Warburton, to Gloucester, 1760; Samuel Squire, to St. David's, 1761; Edward Bowyer Sparke, to Chester, 1810; John Parsons, to Peterborough, 1813; Thomas Musgrave, to Hereford, 1837; St. John Basil Wynne-Wilson, to Bath and Wells, 1921; and now, Edward Arthur Burroughs, to Ripon, 1925.

DAIRIES OR STORE CATTLE.

VIEWS HELD BY CORK FARMERS.

Mr. B. W. Brozier moved the following resolution at the last meeting of the Cork County Agricultural Committee:—"Owing to altered conditions in trade of Irish cattle and the growing need for store cattle of a quick-maturing type, this Committee recommend that forty additional premiums for bulls of a beef breed be included in their cattle-breeding scheme for the coming year."

He said that there was a growing need and a very urgent need in many parts of the country for a different class of bull than that which had already been allocated a premium. A very serious matter was the heavy imports of Canadian cattle which were entering into competition with their most valuable asset, the store cattle. They should concentrate on those who catered for the store cattle trade on animals in the beef breed, whether the Hereford or polled Angus. A great deal of talk had lately been gone into about that country and Denmark. Denmark, they all knew, was a dairying country. The area of Denmark's arable land was 7,956,000 acres, while the Free State was 12,181,242. The population of Denmark was 3,252,000 people, and the Free State 3,165,000. They carried 1,230,665 milch cows in the Free State and 2,984,558 store cattle, while in Denmark they carried 1,310,900 milch cows and 1,220,000 store cattle. These figures showed that the country was in a very different position to a dairy country.

The land of the Free State was varied in its character. Part of it was very suitable for dairying, part for tillage, and part for the raising of cattle. If they brought one of their 1,000 gallon cows to an area suitable for tillage she would go back at once in her milk. The people who occupied the tillage area catered very largely for store cattle. They looked upon it that a beef bull was necessary to carry on their trade. It did not in any way mean that it would interfere with the work done by the Shorthorn Breeders' Society. The cattle-breeding scheme had practically wiped out a number of bulls, and they must replace them by animals of a well-bred character.

WHERE BLACK CATTLE PAY BEST.

Mr. D. O'Callaghan, seconding, said that he represented the district of West Cork. They had some rich valleys in it, but the prevailing character of the land was wet, hilly and mountainous. To put the shorthorn in those places would be to put a cart horse in for the Derby. Put a shorthorn in those lands and they would become small, delicate and very emaciated. In fact, there was no chance for their existence, only for a very short time. He had 50 years' experience with the shorthorn, and he found that they would not produce one-third of the milk that they would produce in a fertile place. They knew from experience that the black cattle were the best for their class of land.

He did not want to give the impression that he would dream of keeping the progeny of those black cattle for milkers. He never kept a black cow for milk, but he simply sold the calves as yearlings and at six months old, and he and the small farmers procured cattle for milking purposes of the shorthorn type. The cattle when sold as yearlings gave a better return to the small farmer.

Mr. D. O'Connor said that they would all be pleased to get the premiums about which Mr. Brazier spoke, provided that they had the funds; but he was rather afraid that their funds were short, and they would have great difficulty even to tide over the present premiums without further decreasing them. What was the object of subsidising the black bull? It reminded him of the dole. The people of the county had for the last 25 years spent a great lot of money trying to improve the cattle of the country. For the last couple of years the people of that county, and Limerick and other dairying counties would not touch anything but the dual purpose shorthorn. They were trying to build up a foundation of a proper breed of cattle in that country.

GRAZING AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

Mr. W. J. Philpott moved a direct negative to the motion. In the first place, that was a dairying county. In the dairying portions of the county they had employment and in the grazing portions they had unemployment. He had seen herds of store cattle grazing, and labourers in the end of that field hungry and their families. They could not get employment with store cattle. Their duty was to provide employment in the county and to divide the funds to the best purpose. If they gave the premiums to the beef bulls they would be encouraging that grazing and they would be knocking dairying on the head. The creameries all through the county would be shut down, and they would be injuring the bacon industry.

Mr. John O'Connor seconded.

Mr. O'Mullane said that even if the country became all dairying, they would still be sending cows to England and not be interfering with unemployment.

Mr. Mullins said that England was their best market, and they should produce cattle suitable for that market. The Canadian cattle were doing them out of that market. The Aberdeen-Angus and the Hereford were superior cattle, and realised £2 per head, as two-year-olds, more than any other cattle.

On a division, the resolution was defeated.

PRESBYTERIANISM IN THE FREE STATE

SUPPORTED BY THE NORTH.

Preaching in the Waterside Presbyterian Church, Londonderry, on Sunday, the Rev. William Corkey, M.A., Windsor Church, said that one of the great weaknesses of the Reformed Church had been its divisions. Paul said: "Ye are members one of another," and it was the duty of the great Protestant Churches to stand together, in view of the effort that was being made to win England back to the Church of Rome.

In the Prebyterian Church it had always been their boast that they all held together and helped one another. He had been preaching in a church in the Free State recently when he had on one side of him the rector and on the other the Methodist minister.

There were some little churches there where there were only fifteen or twenty families. They could never keep the door open or keep the flag flying were it not that people in the North were holding out a helping hand and sending down funds to preach the Gospel in those lonely places. There was not a small, isolated church in the South and West of Ireland that they were not standing by and supporting. If they abandoned these outposts and left them to themselves, very soon the Presbyterian Church would have no representatives throughout the South and West.

DUBLIN HOUSING.

but merely postponed its solution, because there was no return to pre-war conditions. Building did not re-commence, because the cost of living had not fallen quite low enough relatively to rents to make it financially attractive to build. The result was that most European countries affected were forced to bridge the difference by means of Government grants. In Ireland the efforts in this direction were remarkably successful. Under the several Acts that were passed up to 1921 no fewer than 42,000 labourers' cottages were built. The Act of 1924 enabled over 3,000 houses to be built within the space of two years. This progress was great, but it was not commensurate with the people's needs.

BEAUTY AND SPACE.

Aesthetic considerations must be regarded, because the citizens required beauty as well as space. The work involved, not only the rapid building of thousands of new houses, but also the clearance of slums, the re-planning of new districts, the planting of garden cities, and the improvement of transport facilities. All this must be dealt with in a wise and business-like way, so as to increase as little as possible the burden of taxation. The solution of these questions presented great opportunities for civic service, and the controversies which would arise next year as to whether the relations between landlord and tenant should be a subject of continued restrictive legislation or should be left to the free play of economic forces might be answered by recalling that the Legislature had already recognised that, not only the physical, but also the mental and moral health and progress of the growing community required continued legislative protection.

ECONOMIC RENTS.

Mr. Bradbury, proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Hughes, said that the housing problem could not be satisfactorily solved until every man could afford to build a house for himself, or pay a rent which would be remunerative to the landlord.

Mr. Alfred Fannin said that his opinion was that the Rent Restriction Act should be continued, especially in regard to those who exacted high rents for rooms in tenement houses in Dublin, and for which the tenants got very poor accommodation.

Mr. Sparkhall Brown said that when it was calculated that of the 700,000 houses in the country 7,000 became uninhabitable every year it would be seen that there was no attempt being made to grapple with the wastage.

Mr. McGloughlin said that the solution of the housing question was not an economic problem. At present things had been so arranged that there was no security for the landlord. His opinion was that the Government of the country ought to do the whole job and saddle the country with the whole burden.

The vote of thanks was passed.

CATTLE DROVER KILLED ON THE ROAD.

MOTOR DRIVER CHARGED.

At an inquest in the Royal City of Dublin Hospital yesterday on James Lambert (56), cattle drover, of 6 Poplar Dwellings, Charlotte street, who was fatally injured as the result of a motor accident at Sandford road, Ranelagh, last Saturday, it was stated that a motor car ran into one of two bullocks driven by the deceased man, knocking it off its feet, and then ran over the drover.

The verdict of the jury was that Lambert died from shock and hemorrhage, due to a fracture of the base of the skull, caused by being knocked down by a motor car. In the jury's opinion, the driver of the car did not exercise due caution.

The motor car was driven by Frank G. Levingston, a railway engineer, of 27 Oakley road, Ranelagh, who was remanded on bail yesterday at the Dublin District Court on the charge of causing Lambert's death.

Giving evidence at the inquest, Miss Ivy Furlong, 16 Pembroke road, who was driving with Mr. Levingston at the time of the accident, said that as they approached Cherryfield avenue she saw two bullocks emerging suddenly from the avenue. The man in charge of the animals rushed at one of the bullocks and struck it. The animal dashed across the road, and the car ran into it.

It was the witness's belief that when it was struck by the car the bullock fell on top of the drover. The collision had caused the car to stop dead, but there was sufficient impetus left to permit of the car proceeding for a few yards and passing over the deceased man. The accident was unavoidable, and the car was travelling at about fifteen miles only an hour.

Replying to Inspector Cuddihy, the witness said that the motor horn was not sounded, because the road was apparently clear.

Ernest Cuddy, dentist, 90 Drumcondra road, who was cycling along Sandford road at the time, said that after being struck the bullock dashed away. He believed that it was almost an impossibility to avoid the accident. The car was being driven at about fourteen miles an hour.

Another witness stated that the animal was lifted "clean off the ground." The car, which had stopped momentarily, gave a jolt and then struck the deceased man, who fell on his face.

Sergeant Kennedy, who examined the scene of the accident, said that he found the road "ripped" for a distance of 29 feet. He believed that the car was "going at a desperate speed."

"THE TRIUMPH OF RIGHTEOUSNESS."

Lecturing on "The Triumph of Righteousness" at the Mansion House last night, Mr. C. Coombs said that there was no evidence that mankind was evolving towards a disposition of general good-will; the indications were that selfishness was increasing. The Bible clearly showed that it was God's intention to establish a kingdom on earth which would deliver man from every injustice. The present phase of human history was finishing its course, he added; the Kingdom of God was being set up, and millions now living would never die.

It is a mercy that we have to wear clothes: they conceal a multitude of blemishes.—Professor Arthur Thomson.

YOUR CHILDREN'S GLASSE

Why Expert Fitting is Essenti

Because proper attention in childhood w often obviate the need of wearing glass at all in later life, too much importan cannot be attached to the correct fitti of children's glasses.

As the child grows, so its face alters size and shape; the distance from the ey to the ears and between the eyes increase and the bridge of the nose gradually tak definite shape.

Spectacle frames, as a result, are slow but surely outgrown. The lenses are ther fore thrown out of position, fail to gi the prescribed correction and cause hea aches and eyestrain, so that the child m actually see better without the glasse

The tenderness of the young skin another reason for the exercise of t greatest care, for unless the glasses a perfectly comfortable a child is apt discard them whenever opportunity offer

If the bridge is misshapen or misplace it may permanently score the nose; whi sides that are too long or too short ma badly chafe the ears.

Rampageous small boys are so liable t knock their glasses out of shape tha it is advisable to inspect the fram regularly. A blow or a fall that does n damage to the lenses may still be sufficien to impair their efficiency very serious by disturbing their alignment.

Let PHOSFERINE Protect You Against INFLUENZA

FROM the very first day you take PHOSFERINE you will gain new confidence, new life, new endurance. It makes you eat better and sleep better, and you will look as fit as you feel. Phosferine is given with equally good results to the children.

Mrs Miller, of Bellingham, writes:

"SOME time ago I was a martyr to Anæmia and got into a very run-down and nervous condition. Nothing seemed to do me any good, though I tried numerous preparations. Then I was told to try Phosferine, and after only a few days' trial I noticed an improvement in my health. I persevered, and in less than a month I was a new woman. That terrible feeling of lassitude left me, and I regained my strength, and the colour came back to my face, my whole nervous system was built up and my health entirely restored. My husband and all the children have also proved the value of Phosferine, especially as a safeguard against winter colds and threatened Influenza. At the first approach of colds, neuralgic pains or loss of appetite, we resort to Phosferine, and it never fails."—140, Southend Lane, Bellingham, Kent.

DUNLOP "ON THE ROAD BOOKS."

HOLYHEAD AND THE ENGLISH LAKES.

Messrs. E. J. Burrow and Co., Cheltenham, have just published, at 6d. each, the fourth and fifth volumes of the Dunlop "On the Road" books, which conduct the traveller out of England—the one to Holyhead for Ireland, the other round the English Lakes to Scotland.

The Holyhead "strip" maps take the motorist from London Bridge to Barnet, and thence over the Menai Suspension Bridge across Anglesey to Holyhead. All along the route are tiny pictures of the notable—from the Angel at Islington to Meriden's old village cross, which marks the centre of England.

Volume five follows the Holyhead road from London Bridge as far as Stony Stratford, whence by way of Wootton and Market Harborough it reaches Leicester, and runs on through the towns of Derby and Manchester. The Lakes are approached by Lancaster and Kendal. From Carlisle the way is mapped to Glasgow through Gretna Green, Lockerbie, and the collieries of the West of Scotland.

CANON GREER

APPOINTED TO HOLY TRINITY, KILLINEY.

The Board of Nomination for the Parish of Holy Trinity, Killiney, met yesterday at the Diocesan offices, 43 Kildare street, Dublin, when Canon Greer, M.A., Incumbent of St. George's Parish, Dublin, was nominated successor to Canon Stoney, who recently retired.

Canon Greer was ordained thirty-six years ago, and became curate at Templemichael, Longford. Two years later he was appointed curate at Zion Church, Rathgar. In 1894 he became rector of St. Catherine's, and in 1909 was appointed to St. George's Parish.

During his incumbency of St. Catherine's Canon Greer's organising activities resulted in the building of new schools and a teacher's residence and the establishment of St. Victor's Church and the new rectory. Branches of the Boys' Brigade and the Girls' Brigade were also founded in the parish.

During his incumbency of St. George's Parish Canon Greer was responsible for a general advance, and through his instrumentality many parochial institutions were improved and enlarged. In 1923 Canon Greer succeeded the late Canon Jennings in the canonry in Christ Church Cathedral.

STAINED GLASS WINDOW.

CEREMONY IN INSTIOGE CHURCH

A special Service was held in Instioge Parish Church recently for the dedication of a stained glass window, erected by members of their family in memory of Major James Connellan, J.P., D.L., and Mrs. Connellan, of Coolmore, and their only son, Captain Peter Connellan, Hampshire Regiment, who was killed in action at Armentières in October, 1914. The Service was conducted by the incumbent, the Rev. H. McClelland, Mus.D., and the dedication ceremony and sermon by Canon Power.

The window, in three lights, divided by stone muillions, was designed by Miss K. O'Brien, and carried out at Miss Purser's stained glass works, 24 Upper Pembroke street, Dublin. The centre light represents the Ascension, the figure of Christ rising in a beam of light, with an angel on either side; at the base are the disciples gazing upwards. In the right light is a winged female figure of Charity, and in the left light that of a knight in armour, also winged, representing Valour, and bearing a banner inscribed: "Armentières."

The white man must no longer dominate the coloured man, even for his own good.—Lord Willingdon.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

TILLAGE AND TAXES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I am the unfortunate owner of land, rather wet and heavy, and for that reason exempted under the late Corn Production Act. Still, crops can be grown successfully on most of it; meadows are uniformly heavy, and the land gives excellent summer grazing, though too wet for wintering cattle. Before and during the European War a fair income could be made by taking in grazing cattle during the summer from neighbouring tillage farmers; this enabled them to till more of their own land and feed more cattle during the winter. Now, however, there is less tillage; tillage farmers keep fewer cattle, and those only at home, and the summer grazing trade is a thing of the past.

After the war, as some such state of affairs seemed inevitable, I went in for dairying and pigs, tilling more and more every year to feed the stock. Of that part that can be tilled, I tilled this year some sixty acres, or just twenty per cent. Crops were good and well saved, with the result that the total value of all corn produced might almost pay the rates. In my case the price was not so material, as all corn grown on the farm is to feed stock, but I commend the fact to the notice of Mr. J. J. Walsh. A scheme for subsidising any increased acreage of tillage over this year's area has been put forward; this is no assistance to those who are already up to their maximum. A better scheme suggests a bonus on every cow milked over the proportion of one cow to ten acres of land—no use to those who are not near a creamery.

The fact is that no scheme of any kind is of any assistance so long as the farmer is taxed to the hilt to provide high salaries for thousands of Government and County Council officials. Tariffs, so far, have only added to the burden. The heads of the Farmers' Union only seem to be able to grasp the possibility of economising in some small detail, like roadmen's wages, but forget that the officials' salaries swallow up most of the rates. For instance, we are told that the Secretary of our County Council gets £1,200 per annum. He would be well paid with £900, and the extra £300 would pay 2s. per week extra to 120 roadmen for the six winter months. Similarly the Government reduced the pay of postmen and old age pensions, but forgot the high salaries drawn by themselves and others in departmental offices.

Mr. Walsh has a very low opinion of the heads of the Farmers' Union. If he is mistaken—and I hope he is—they will forthwith start a campaign to cut down all bureaucratic salaries, both in Government and County Council offices, from the President down to the office boys. Such a campaign has already been started in England. Legislative action probably would be required, but it would not be difficult to organise a force of public opinion, now unfortunately absent, to carry out such action without much delay. This alone would cheapen the cost of living, and give a lever to persuade Labour to moderate its demands. Work would be more plentiful, and unemployment less. Perhaps, also, some of these officials, when their salaries are reduced and cash not too easily come by, will bend their mighty intellects to the problem of tackling the "profiteers," who are taking the little—the very little—that taxation has left the unhappy farmer.—Yours, etc.,

DISPENSARY DOCTORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your issue of to-day you represent the South Tipperary Farmers' Union as being desirous of the abolition of the payment of dispensary doctors' substitutes, "as no other professional man enjoys such privileges." Might I quote a few other "privileges" enjoyed by dispensary doctors?

(1) Dispensary doctors are the lowest-paid professional men in the service of the State, the average salary being less than £5 a week.

(2) They receive no travelling allowances. Such allowances, if paid at Civil Service rates, would in 98 per cent. of cases exceed the actual salary by at least one-third.

(3) They pay the same road-tax as the "pleasure motorist," and a motor car has become a necessity for a doctor.

(4) Their work is never finished. They have to be on duty for twenty-four hours out of the twenty-four.

(5) They are open to criticism (and often abuse), to which no other professional man can be subjected.

(6) They have—up to a recent date, at least—been drawn from a class whose humanitarian and social instincts preclude them from "striking" for better terms.—Yours, etc.,

Edward T. King, M.B.,
Honorary Secretary, County Dublin Medical Committee.

Foxrock, Co. Dublin,

UNSHOD DONKEYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Several prosecutions have been taken lately for the working of unshod donkeys. Some exception has been taken to this by owners working donkeys on bogs, and they assert that working them on bogs, with shoes, would be cruelty. It could not possibly cause pain for at this time of year all the turf is on the harder parts of bogs or else on the bog road. There is no question of drawing loads through wet bog at present; for it would be quite impossible. These same animals have to take turf along the main and bog roads—which are generally in a terrible condition—to the houses. There is, then, great cruelty in making them draw loads on these bad and often stony roads and boreens, without shoes.

The insistence on shoeing will make these animals of greater value, as their hooves will be attended to, which is not the case now in one out of a hundred. Their hooves should be looked after while young, just as those of a young horse are. Hundreds of donkeys are practically valueless because of this form of neglect. They have been neglected through carelessness, callousness and parsimony. The result is often terrible—the hooves twisted into fantastic shapes, impossible in many instances to rectify, and certainly causing unnecessary suffering to an already too much ill-treated animal. The horn becomes soft, the foot turns over, and the animal has the utmost difficulty in walking; therefore, drawing a load is still more painful. If shoeing be insisted upon, owners of donkeys will soon begin to realise that they are bound to look after the hooves properly, and that the value of the animal is enhanced. As it is, tourists are often greatly shocked at the neglected state of donkeys' hooves in this country.

The excuse that they are drawing turf would only hold good in the middle of summer, while it is being taken to the edge of the bog to be built into stacks. At other times there is no excuse for not shoeing donkeys, particularly now that the price of shoeing has gone down to its original price, in most places, of 1s. 6d. per set of shoes, and nonepence for what is called "a remove." A donkey is not used solely on bogs, but has to do all the general work as well, carrying loads to market, etc., and earns much for his owners. He is surely entitled to some consideration and comfort in return for his hard labour. Might I urge that approaches to bogs should be made firmer?—Yours, etc.,

K. M. Sherwell.

Dublin, October 12th, 1925.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS ACTIVITIES.

Addressing the Amateur Press Association at 19 Upper Merrion street, Dublin, last night, Mr. Bolton C. Waller said that the main purpose of the League of Nations was to build and harmonise world society by extending co-operation among the nations. At Geneva the world had now a centre at which all kinds of activities for the mutual benefit of nations could be easily and speedily carried out.

BRITISH TRADE IN SEPTEMBER.

IMPORTS RISE AND EXPORTS FALL.

An increase of £6,192,430 in imports and a falling off in exports by £303,131, as compared with the August figures, are revealed by the Board of Trade returns for September, published yesterday. Imports amounted to £97,925,034, as compared with £91,732,604 in August, and £100,854,706 in September of last year. Exports totalled £60,734,868, as against £61,037,999 in August, and £62,282,876 in September a year ago.

With regard to imports, comparing September with September there was a net increase of £501,026 in food, drink, and tobacco. The outstanding advance was one of £1,053,236 in meat, while there was a decrease of £769,297 in grain and flour, which was probably due to the decrease in price of those articles. Raw materials and articles mainly unmanufactured rose by £949,878. A notable feature was the rise in the value of rubber, the increase under this heading being £2,026,425. Against this was a decrease of £1,144,239 in wool, raw and waste, and woollen rags.

There was a decrease in the import of articles wholly or mainly manufactured of £4,350,019. The silk duty has apparently had the result of reducing the imports by £1,589,971. With regard to British exports, grain and flour are down by £564,647. Raw materials and articles mainly unmanufactured show a reduction of £2,178,045, coal alone accounting for a drop of £2,078,520.

There is a net decrease of £94,497 in articles wholly or mainly manufactured. The biggest decrease—one of £700,070—is in woollen and worsted yarns and manufactures, while the largest increase totalled £696,890 in vehicles, including locomotives, ships, and aircraft. For the nine months ending September the total imports are valued at £965,477,025—an increase over the corresponding period of 1924 of £56,204,797; and the total exports are £692,109,221—a decrease of £48,364.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald is to address a mass meeting at Hull on Saturday, November 7.

NO MORE TENDER, ACHING FEET

MEDICAL MAN SAYS TRY ONE DIP IN "SALTRATES" WATER FOR QUICK AND LASTING RESULTS WHEN FEET BURN, SMART, SWELL, ITCH, BLISTER AND PERSPIRE GIVES PRESCRIPTION.

The blood circulation in the feet is nearly always defective, due to their great distance from the heart. For this reason the feet are especially susceptible to heat and cold, the skin callouses easily, pores clog, corns form, and various unhealthy conditions develop rapidly. The lack of proper circulation always renders injuries to the feet highly dangerous and liable to infection, tetanus (lock-jaw) being frequent and tissue repair very slow. Such diseases as Dropsy and Gout usually affect the feet first of all. Bearing the whole weight of the body, shoe pressure, on sensitive, irritated nerves and on delicate blood-vessels all tend to make matters worse, for the blood is Nature's own soothing, healing, and curative agent. It will do what no medicine, liniment, or ointment can. When you bruise your flesh, you instinctively rub it to attract the blood and soothe the pain. Stimulate the circulation of the feet by resting them in hot "Saltrates" water, and see how quickly your aches, pains, and other foot troubles disappear. Even rheumatic twinges, stiffness, swellings, and inflammation immediately subside. A half-pound of Reudel Bath Saltrates is all you need. It immediately medicates and adds oxygen to the water, and its cost is extremely slight. All chemists would have the refined compound in stock, and it is very generally prescribed by physicians and chiropodists, since there exists no other means of imparting similar curative qualities to a bath or foot-bath.

Common brotherhood is a far more real thing in the world of Islam than it is in Christianity.—The Rev. W. W. Cash.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

OUTLOOK AT NEWMARKET.

THE CESAREWITCH.

FANCIES FOR TO-DAY.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

NEWMARKET, Monday Night.

Opinions are so divergent among people who follow the arts and practices of racing about the probable result of Wednesday's Cesarewitch that it seems perfectly safe to regard it as a most open race. There is particularly strong partisanship even over the horses trained about this town, especially as between Bellman, Mandelieu and Winalot. The market has been speaking rather eloquently again to-day in favour of the last-named, who is particularly well in himself, I am assured. He, Bellman, Mandelieu and Vionnet are now disputing favouritism. It is stated to-day that Fox has been engaged to ride the French horse, Ormuzd, as Lindborg is incapacitated. Fox will have to put up seven or eight pounds over-weight, but I am not sure that the extra weight will not be all to the advantage of the colt.

Shining Spear has been struck out of the race, and there thus disappears an interesting candidate. Kwannon, Flint Jack and Baton Rouge are among others who have gone out, but none of these had any chance. I am a little surprised that Captain Boyd-Rochfort's filly, Seradella, stands at such a long price, for on her Newbury victory she has a fair chance, and I would rather have 33's about her chance than 10's about some of the others. A filly who can get the two miles at Newbury has a reasonably good pretensions of getting the Cesarewitch course, and that is more than one can say about some of the others.

At the moment I am far more interested in the match in the Champion Stakes to-morrow, between Picaroon and Pharos, than in the Cesarewitch, but I find it hard to make a decision between them, and I have a great admiration for both the three-year-old and the five-year-old. I count the fact that the Manton colt will have Frank Bullock in the saddle as a point in favour of Picaroon, but it is to be remembered that there is no harder horse to handle in a race than Picaroon, and that Bullock might not, on him, be able to ride his own peculiar sort of match—that is, tucking himself in at the girths of the other, and keeping his rival thinking all the time where and when he is going to come. One has seen Bullock so many times outri[de] other jockeys in this sort of event that one must have the most profound respect for his horsemanship, though he occasionally meets his match, as when on Caravel last year on this course he failed to outwit Carslake on Twelve Pointer. Having, however, seen PHAROS put up a performance on Saturday that was simply magnificent, it must turn the scale ever so slightly in his favour. I have no idea which of the two will start favourite, as much will depend on whether Taylor thinks he has got Picaroon absolutely at the top of his form.

Legatee, the two-year-old for whom Mr. Courtauld paid 9,100 guineas at the sale of the late Sir Edward Hulton's horses, makes his [bow] to the public in the Alington Stakes, but he may not beat either William of Tyre or FINGLAS. The latter, who will be the mount of Archibald, ran second to Swift and Sure at the July meeting, and is a good deal fancied to win this. I choose PARD again to beat Lippia in the Ditch Mile Nursery. JULDI should have no great difficulty in winning the Newmarket Oaks. LEGIONNAIRE was a little unlucky when beaten behind Tolgus on Friday at Kempton Park, in that he was squeezed out early in the race and had to make a different course for himself. He would never have beaten Tolgus anyhow, but he ran well enough to suggest that he may beat the much-fancied Booklet in the Clearwell Stakes here.

Larissa, who was beaten at Haydock Park on Saturday, will likely be started for the Newport Nursery at Wolverhampton, and only in her absence would I choose the AROON FILLY to win. POLYMORPHOUS is fancied to win the Staffordshire Handicap at the same meeting. GALTEE MORE.

LONDON BETTING—YESTERDAY.

At the midday call-over on the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire at the Victoria Club yesterday, there was a crowded and representative gathering, and consequently a good market. Bellman opened with the acceptance of 700 to 100 taken twice, but subsequently receded to 8 to 1, after being supported to win about £4,500. Mandelieu and Vionnet were each supported to win upwards of £7,000 at 9 to 1, the price still being offered. Winalot opened at 1,000 to 70, and was backed down to 10 to 1, to win in the aggregate about £12,000. Ormuzd came in for notice to win about £3,000, at 18 to 1. Dumas was befriended at 1,000 to 40, taken three times, and various bets down to 19 to 1, to win upwards of £16,000, and was decidedly the best-backed candidate. All available at 25 to 1 was accepted about Confirmation, leaving 32's the top tender. Offers about Forseti at 33 to 1 were taken, but tenders of 28 to 1 were not accepted. Hurstwood found backers to win about £5,500, at 33 to 1 and 28 to 1. Tournesol found friends at 33 to 1, when 30 to 1 became the best unaccepted tender. The remaining candidates were easy at their quoted rates.

For the Cambridgeshire, Verdict opened at 20 to 1, followed by intermediate bets to win about £12,500, down to 13 to 1. Twelve Pointer was easy at 100 to 7, as were the remaining candidates quoted.

At last evening's call-over at the Beaufort Club the attendance was small, and there were few alterations in the prices. Bellman was supported to win about £4,000, down to 100 to 14 taken and offered. Vionnet was second in request, being backed from 8 to 1 down to 17 to 2, to win £3,500. Winalot opened at 1,000 to 90, and closed at 10's, after about £5,000 was written against this candidate. Mandelieu opened at 100 to 7, and was for some time easy at this price. Subsequently, however, 100 to 9 was taken and offered, after being supported to win about £3,500. Dumas had admirers to win about £4,500, at 18 to 1. Cloudbank was well backed at 40 to 1. Details:—

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME AND SELECTIONS.

The flat racing season has yet six weeks to run, and the current week marks an important period, with the Cesarewitch as the paramount event. Not the least interesting item on to-day's card is the Champion Stakes, for which forfeit was paid by the respective owners of no fewer than forty-three of the forty-six horses entered, the animals left in being Pharos, Twelve Pointer, and Picaroon. Here is the nucleus of a sporting affair, which, however, may not materialise, as Twelve Pointer will probably wait for the Select Stakes on the Friday. There are three races to-day which are restricted to first season racers. It is too much to expect the pick of the entry for the Alington Stakes to turn out, and at the moment it looks like going to William of Tyre or Finglas. The Clearwell Stakes almost invariably attracts two or three smart youngsters, and although eighty-one of the original ninety-four entered for it have paid forfeit, a classy lot stand their ground, and, perhaps, Legionnaire may have most to fear from Booklet. The Ditch Mile Nursery is a bit of a puzzle at the moment, but post-bettors may be able to probe it satisfactorily. Lippia, win and place, appears to be best choice. Selections:—

Alington Stakes—William of Tyre; if absent, Finglas.
Clearwell Stakes—Legionnaire; if absent, Booklet.

THE 13TH EVENT AT MALLOW.

There are six races on each day at Mallow, on the 14th and 15th October. 223 horses have entered for these races. For the 13th event, which will take place after the 5th race on the 2nd day, the horses are barred, and the public alone will compete. If YOU would like to get £40, £10, or even £5, for nothing, come to Mallow Races. Those coming on both days have two chances given to them free. In any case you will see the best racing of the season, and as form comes out true on Mallow's perfect racecourse, you have only to name the best horse at the weights and THE BOOKMAKER PAYS. Come early to avoid crush. The Band plays from 1.30.—(Advt.)

DUNSTALL PARK

(WOLVERHAMPTON).

PASS THE MINT'S EASY WIN.

QUICK STICK AGAIN.

The Dunstall Park programme was carried through under unpleasant conditions yesterday, for a light drizzling rain commenced during the morning and continued throughout the afternoon, while the atmosphere was raw and cold. There was little doubt that Quick Stick had an outstanding chance in the Dunstall Two-Year-Old Plate. He proved a clever winner in the last furlong, but had to be strongly handled by Smirke before he got the better of Spearfish, who had got smartly away from the barrier.

Cappawhite turned out for the Kingswinford Selling Handicap, and racing up to the leaders below the distance had little difficulty in keeping the lead. Wee Mon ran well for six furlongs.

It was not an impressive performance that Simonian gave when he won the Staveley Selling Nursery, for in the last furlong he was tiring rapidly. However, by forceful riding Weston managed to get the favourite past the post by a narrow margin from Glen Tree.

Gordon Richards got within one of his hundredth success this season when he won the Wyfold Handicap on Pass the Mint. Flaith Mor closed up a good favourite, but could not do any better than he did at Nottingham, where he finished fourth behind Held Fast. Night Guard performed moderately, and never looked like taking a hand in the finish.

Fawn Way, who ran in the Thorneycroft Handicap, is better suited to a shorter distance, but he did well to get as near as he did, finishing second to Chinkapin, who won by a length and a half.

Burns rode a good finish on Down with the Dust to beat Endwell and the favourite, David Garrick, in a good finish for the Stanton Plate. Details:—

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

James Jessop, a stable lad who used to ride in the trial gallops at Beckhampton, was thrown and killed whilst exercising a horse there yesterday.

T. Pryor, who has ridden two winners of the Cesarewitch, Light Dragoon and Charley's Mount, will ride for the Maharajah of Kholapur in India this winter.

We are informed that there is no foundation for the rumour that Mandelieu has been coughing. Lord Derby's four-year-old is stated to be as well as could be wished.

The Press Association's Newmarket Correspondent understands that F. Fox, and not W. Murch, will have the mount on Ormuzd in the Cesarewitch.

Shining Spear was struck out of the Cesarewitch at 10.33 a.m. yesterday, and Flint Jack, Despote, Kwannon, Baton Rouge and Mint d'Or at 9 a.m. yesterday. Mendoza has also been scratched.

J. G. Hatfield, Middlesbrough, won the 220 Yards National Swimming Championship at Newcastle last night by three-quarters of a yard from Albert E. Dickin, Penguin S.C., London, in 2 min. 34 2-5 sec. T. Scott, Oldham, was third.

The scratching of Coramond out of all engagements in 1925 at 9 a.m. yesterday includes the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire Stakes.

The following are non-runners at Newmarket to-day:—Visitors' Handicap—Jeddart and Drive On. Doubtful runners:—Visitors' Handicap—Impress. Apprentice Plate—Impress and Great Care.

At Wolverhampton to-day the following are non-runners — Bushbury Handicap—Joss House. Madeley Handicap—Royal Ensign. Doubtful runners—Staffordshire Handicap—Rocketer. Consolation Welter — Novo Monaste.

AUSTRALIAN WOOL SALES.

At the wool sales held at Sydney yesterday 8,587 bales were offered, of which 7,853 were sold. Private sales consisted of 1,657 bales. There was an average selection. The market was strong. Cross-breds made late rates. Bradford bidding was moderate. Good clearances were effected. Greasy merinos realised 26½d.

At the wool sales held at Melbourne 7,400 bales were offered, 98 per cent. of which were sold. Competition was keen and general. The Continent took the great bulk of the merinoes and cross-breds. Japan and America gave good support, and Yorkshire was much more active. Merinos, comebacks and fine cross-breds showed a hardening tendency, while lambs advanced slightly. Other varieties were unchanged. The highest realised for merino was 25½d.

THOMASTOWN FAIR.

The monthly fair at Thomastown on Thursday was the largest since the great September fair of 1921. There was a good attendance of buyers, and some choice lots of cattle were purchased at slightly reduced prices. On the whole, trade was brisk in all departments, and sellers appeared to be well satisfied with the prices. Springers and new milch cows were eagerly sought, and those of first quality were sold at remunerative prices. Fat cattle were also in good request, while store cattle suitable for cross-Channel purposes were quickly bought up. In the sheep department trade was very quiet, and the prices ruling were about the same as at the September fair. Lambs were in better demand than fat sheep. Young pigs, of which there was a fair supply, were quickly bought up, and by eleven o'clock there were none left unsold. The prices obtained were almost double those ruling at the September fair.

BUBONIC PLAGUE CURE.

IRISH TIMES FOREIGN SERVICE.
FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
THE HAGUE.

Professor Dherelle, the noted Canadian scientist, has forwarded to the Royal Dutch Academy of Sciences details of his discovery for curing bubonic plague by injecting bacteriophagic serum into the veins of patients.

Dutch scientists are of the opinion that the discovery will have to be further investigated, but it is believed that it is of the highest interest to tropical countries in which bubonic plague is prevalent.

VACATION LAW MOTIONS.

GALWAY BREACH OF PROMISE.

PLAINTIFF AS RECEIVER.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

In the case of Margaret Mannion, of Tyrer, Newbridge, Ballinasloe, Co. Galway, against John Wade, Menlough, Ballinasloe,

Mr. Davitt (instructed by Messrs. Hogan and Shield) applied ex parte on behalf of the plaintiff for an order appointing a receiver over so much of the rents of the defendant's lands of Menlough as would satisfy a judgment for £100 and £60 9s. 5d. costs obtained by her in an action against the defendant for breach of promise of marriage.

It appeared that the defendant, who was a farmer, had left the locality, and his present address was not known to the plaintiff. He had no personal property against which the judgment could be levied, but was the registered owner of the lands of Menlough, in Co. Galway.

Mr. Justice Hanna made an order appointing the plaintiff receiver over the rents and profits of the lands.

SERVING A WRIT IN NORTHERN COUNTIES.

IMPORTANT MATTERS FOR ARGUMENT.

In the case of the National Bank, Ltd., v. Paul Joseph Carroll,

Mr. Joseph Mooney (instructed by Mr. P. C. Furlong) applied for an order giving the plaintiffs liberty to issue and serve a writ out of the jurisdiction on the intended defendant in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Matthew Coghlan, manager of the Wexford branch of the National Bank, stated in an affidavit that on the 14th February, 1914, the plaintiffs entered judgment against the defendant, whose address and occupation then were Leinster Warehouse, North Main street, Wexford, shopkeeper, for £55 18s. and £5 11s. costs. The intended defendant now resided at 48 King street, Derry, outside the jurisdiction of the Court, and had no residence in the Free State. The entire cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Court. The action could be more conveniently tried in the Free State than in Northern Ireland. He believed that it would be necessary for him and other officers of the bank to attend the trial as witnesses. In the event of the Court ordering the production or inspection of any books of the bank, the carriage of the books to Derry or Northern Ireland would materially retard the business of the bank and occasion much more inconvenience to the bank and their customers than if the action were tried in Dublin. So far as he was aware, the defendant could have no witness, save himself, with any information relative to the action, while the bank would be under the necessity of producing several witnesses to prove that the judgment had been obtained, and that it had remained unsatisfied, save for the receipt of £12 8s. 7d., which payment it would be also necessary to prove.

Counsel said that the judgment had been burned, and they would have to bring officials from the solicitor's office to prove that they had got judgment.

Mr. Justice Hanna adjourned the case to the second day of next sittings. Matters of importance might have to be argued. If they took proceedings in the Free State against a man in Northern Ireland and got judgment, there would still be the difficulty about execution in Northern Ireland. Mr. Mooney should be prepared to argue that point when the case came on again.

ENGLISH FIRM'S ACTION.

CASE SENT TO LONGFORD FOR TRIAL.

In the case of Winox, Ltd., of Richmond, Surrey, England, v. Thomas O'Reilly, shopkeeper, Granard, which was to recover £21, balance alleged to be due for goods sold and delivered,

Mr. George O'Connor (instructed by Messrs. C. J. P. Farrell and Co.) moved to have the action remitted for trial to the Circuit Court at Longford.

Mr. Bolton (instructed by Messrs. O'Malley and Co.) opposed the application, and said that he was entitled to final judgment, because the legislation of 1924 did not increase the Circuit Judge's jurisdiction to give more than £5 witnesses' expenses, and in this case, if a witness came from London to attend at Longford, his expenses would probably be more than that.

Mr. O'Connor, replying, said that so far as the action being for £21, the amount claimed, was concerned, they had a communication from the plaintiffs showing that the claim was for £9 6s. 6d., and under all the circumstances the action could be more conveniently tried at Longford.

Mr. Justice Hanna remitted the action for trial to the District Justice at Longford, costs to be costs in the cause, and only such costs to the plaintiffs as the sum that might be decreed for carried, as the action, he said, should originally have been taken in the District Court.

SPECULATION IN CATTLE.

BANKRUPTCY OF CORK FARMER.

Edward Ahearn, farmer, of Rahaniskey, near Cork City, a bankrupt, was examined by Mr. J. A. Reardon (instructed by Messrs. Babington, Clarke and Mooney), on behalf of the Munster and Leister Bank, regarding the ownership of some property.

The bankrupt stated that in October, 1915, he married a widow, Mrs. Anne Hegarty, and went to live on a farm of about 156 acres. A marriage settlement was entered into.

Counsel read the settlement made between husband, wife and their respective fathers. It recited that John Ahearn, the bankrupt's father, should pay Thomas Linehan, the wife's father, £800, and that Mr. Linehan and his daughter should assign to the latter's future husband 96 acres of land, with an option to purchase the balance.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Did he ever exercise the option?

Mr. Reardon—He did, my lord.

Counsel (to witness)—In February, 1921, you became the owner of the entire of these lands?—That is exactly what I want to see about.

From the date of your marriage you have lived on these lands?—Yes, and I am living there still.

I believe you dealt very considerably in cattle?—Unfortunately for myself, I did.

Were all these transactions in cattle carried out in your own name?—Yes.

I think you got advances from the Munster and Leinster Bank in Cork amounting altogether to £4,413 13s. 4d.?—They say so. It is a lot of money to have got through.

Counsel—I dare say it is.

Witness—I cannot account for it. I am the victim, at all events.

Counsel said that on March 9 last the bankrupt himself valued stock and property on the farm at £4,269.

The witness said that since then he had sold some of the stock to carry on, and five of them had been taken away. Since the Court messenger's visit on September 16 his wife had sold the corn.

Do you now suggest your wife is the owner of the stock on this farm? I am told she is.

Do you say she is? She is registered owner, at all events.

On what grounds do you say she is owner of the stock? I do not say she is.

Do you say you are the owner? I do not know. That is what I have come here to decide.

Are you now satisfied you are beneficial owner of the lands?

Mr. Justice Hanna—That is a matter of law.

Mrs. Ahearn, the bankrupt's wife, was also examined, and, in reply to the judge's question, "Do you still claim the stock?" she replied: "It is a matter for the lawyers to decide."

Mr. E. F. Collins, solicitor, appeared for the bankrupt, and when he had read a portion of the settlement,

Mr. Justice Hanna said that it was apparently contemplated that Mrs. Ahearn was to be the registered owner. He had thought that it was a device for the purpose of defeating creditors, but apparently it was contemplated at the time. The question would have to be argued fully, when everybody would be heard. Mr. Reardon could bring any application he was advised. These people seemed to be unfortunate. The bankruptcy seemed to be brought about by speculation in cattle and other causes, but so far as their evidence there was concerned they seemed to be perfectly honest, straightforward people.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

LICENSING SESSIONS.

APPLICATION OF HOWTH HOTEL.

(BEFORE JUDGE DROMGOOLE.)

Michael Burke, proprietor of the Claremont Hotel, Howth, applied for a hotel licence.

Mr. J. O'Connor, K.C. (instructed by Mr. D. H. Charles, solicitor), who appeared for the applicant, said that the hotel was already licensed, but that restrictions were imposed on the hotel premises. Prior to 1920 the hotel belonged to the Tourist Association of Ireland, and was then a fully-licensed premises, with a publichouse licence. When Mr. Burke bought the premises in 1920 there was a great deal of malafide traffic in Howth; and then the pendulum swung very far indeed, with the result that restrictions were imposed on everybody who came forward for a licence. Mr. Burke, instead of getting a transfer of an ordinary seven days' licence, got a hotel licence, with restrictions imposed. He now wanted, not a bar licence, but simply an ordinary hotel licence, with the restrictions removed.

The hotel was a favourite place of resort, and drink could be supplied only to persons residing at the hotel or having meals there. Mr. Burke had built a promenade there, and also additions to the hotel. He had provided a tennis court, garage and electric light at a cost of thousands of pounds, and the restrictions on the licence were a very serious handicap to the place.

The applicant stated that he had expended over £10,000 in improving and fitting up the place. He did not want a public bar in the hotel, but simply wanted to be in a position to supply refreshment to people who came there to bathe or to play tennis.

Mr. James Henry (instructed by Mr. H. J. McCormack), on behalf of the Temperance Association, cross-examined the witness as to previous opposition to his being granted such a licence as he now sought, and the witness replied that he thought that the only opposition was that of the man for whom counsel was now speaking. The form of licence which he got was not arrived at as a compromise. He was forced to sign the undertaking.

Father James Hannahan, Manchester, stated that he had been staying at the Claremont Hotel for some time, and knew it to be conducted excellently. He knew that people had been inconvenienced by not being able to get refreshment.

Mr. Henry—Are you an Irishman?

The witness—I decline to answer that question. I do not see that it has anything to do with the case.

Did the parish priest of Howth tell you about the conditions existing in Howth as regards the bona-fide traffic four or five years ago? He did not.

Did he tell you that the place was crammed with objectionable persons? No.

You have suffered no inconvenience at all? No; I am ordered by my doctor at present not to take anything. (Laughter.)

Mr. William Maynard, electrical engineer, and the Rev. Daniel Byrne, SS. Michael's and John's, Dublin, also gave evidence that the hotel was well conducted.

Sergeant Patrick Drennan, Civic Guards, Howth, stated that he had never seen any irregularities in the hotel, and had heard no complaints about the conduct of the hotel.

Judge Dromgoole said that he did not see why he should impose a restriction which the Legislature had not seen fit to insert in any Statute. He thought that if the applicant was entitled to his licence at all, he was entitled to it fully. He would grant the application under Section 2, Sub-Section 2, of the Act of 1902.

JURY'S HOTEL EXTENSION.

John Watts Manning, manager, applied for a new seven days' licence for the second, third and fourth floors of 9 College Green.

Mr. Vincent Rice, K.C., who, with Mr. C. Kenny (instructed by Messrs. Vincent and Beatty), appeared for the applicant, said that, finding that they wanted more bedroom accommodation, the proprietors of Jury's Hotel had acquired possession of the second, third and fourth floors of the adjoining premises of the Sun Insurance Company. This gave them nine extra bedrooms. The necessary structural alterations had been carried out, and the only entrance to the premises was through the hotel.

The application was granted.

OTHER APPLICATIONS.

Matthew O'Neill applied for a new seven days' licence to be confined to the premises, 55 Talbot street.

Mr. Rice, who, with Mr. Gerard Burke (instructed by Messrs. J. L. Burke and Co.), appeared for the applicant, said that at present the applicant had a seven days' licence for 55 and 56 Talbot street. He proposed to build a separating wall between the two premises, and make the licensed premises No. 55 a lock-up shop and turn No. 56 into an unlicensed grocery shop.

The application was granted.

Christopher Joseph Murphy was granted a confirmation of a seven days' licence for Messrs. Clery's Restaurant, Lower Sackville street, Dublin.

Mr. Joseph O'Connor (instructed by Mr. E. H. Burne, solicitor) appeared for the applicant.

THE LOAN OF A TYPEWRITER.

DUBLIN FIRM'S ACTION.

(BEFORE ASSISTANT JUDGE PIGOT.)

The case of Foley v. McBride was heard, in which the plaintiffs, Breeid Foley and John Foley, trading as the College Green Typewriting Company, 11 College Green, Dublin, sought to recover £50 damages from the defendant, Madame Maud Gonne McBride of Roebuck House, Clonskeagh, in respect of the detention of a typewriting machine, which had ben loaned to her in November, 1922, while she was acting as Secretary to the Prisoners' Defence Committee.

It appeared from the evidence that the machine, which was described as an Underwood, had been for a time at the residence of Miss O'Byrne, Assistant Secretary of the Committee, at Dartmouth square. Both the defendant, Madame McBride, and Miss O'Byrne, were subsequently arrested and kept in prison for some time. Afterwards a machine was returned to the plaintiffs, which, it was alleged, was not the Underwood, but a Royal machine, apparently.

The defence was that while the defendant was a gratuitous bailee and accepted moral responsibility in the matter, she was not liable for the damages claimed under the circumstances.

Judge Pigot dismissed the action, being of opinion that, on the evidence, which was not very clear, the plaintiffs had not established their claim.

Mr. Nolan-Whelan (instructed by Messrs. Noyk and O'Reilly) appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Lynn (instructed by Miss Early) for the defendant.

CLOTHING COMPANY'S TELEPHONE.

CONTRACT NOT ENFORCEABLE.

The Irish Telephone Company, Limited, sued Matthew Bramley, trading as the National Clothing Company, 20 and 21 Temple lane, Dublin, for £111, alleged to be due under a contract dated 23rd February, 1923, for the erection of a telephone installation for the National Clothing Company for ten years at a quarterly rent of £3, payable in advance.

Mr. James Geoghegan, K.C., and Mr. Joseph Healy (instructed by Messrs. Cox and Co.) were for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Maloney (instructed by Mr. Peter Seales) for the defendant.

It appeared that at the time the contract was entered into the defendant was carrying on business in partnership with another man, and the partnership was subsequently dissolved, and the plaintiffs were informed of the dissolution. The defendant, it was stated, had frequently complained that the installation was unsatisfactory, and ultimately asked the plaintiffs to remove it, intimating also that, as trade was so bad, he wanted to close down. A fire occurred on the premises, by which the telephone instruments were entirely destroyed.

It was submitted, for the defence, that the plaintiffs and the defendant stood in the same relation as landlord and tenant, and that the plaintiffs had been guilty of a breach of the contract in not erecting an efficient installation and maintaining it in an efficient condition. It was also contended that there had been a surrender of the premises under the circumstances and an acceptance by the plaintiffs.

Judge Pigot, having reviewed the evidence, said that so far as he could find there was no memorandum in writing in this case to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. He, therefore, held that the contract was not enforceable, and dismissed the action.

STRUGGLE WITH ARMED RAIDER.

IRISH-AUSTRALIAN'S PLUCKY ACTION.

The story of how a returned Australian overcame an armed raider, luckily escaping being shot, was unfolded in Trim Court on last Saturday.

Peter Reilly (27), who stated that he had a grocery shop in Garristown, pleaded not guilty to a charge of demanding, by force and menaces, from Richard Malone, farmer, Rathfeigh, £4 5s., using violence and robbing him of that amount on the morning of the 9th August.

Richard Malone, a man of middle age, told how his wife awoke him and said that there was someone in the room. He saw a man with a revolver, who said that he wanted money. Witness gave him £1. The raider took his trousers off the chair and took £3 5s. from the pocket, and then went upstairs. Hearing shouting, witness proceeded up the stairs and found a Mr. Delaney struggling with the raider, and trying to take a revolver from him. Delaney told the man that if he would hand over the money and the revolver he would let him go. He next saw that man in the Duleek Police Station. He had no doubt whatever that the man in the dock was that man.

"I WILL SHOOT YOU DEAD."

Laurence Delaney said that he slept in Malone's house that night. Between 5 and 6 in the morning he awoke. He heard one man say: "If you don't give me £2 I will shoot you dead." Carey, the workman, came to his room and told him that there was a robber in the house. He went into Carey's room and got behind the door. The man came into the room. Witness struck him and the man staggered on to the bed, and in the meantime fired a shot, which went through the floor. Witness grappled with him in the bed for the possession of the revolver, and was just in time, for the man fired deliberately at him and the bullet went into the ceiling. He handed the revolver over, and witness took the money from him. While in the bed he took the mask off his face. He next saw that man at Mrs. Dowling's, Crossmacoole.

Peter Reilly said that he remembered Sunday, 9th August, because there was an excursion from Drogheda to Killarney. He came into his house on this particular Saturday night at 10.30, and went to bed about 11.30. His brother slept in the same room. He did not wake until 8 in the morning. He did not break into Malone's house. He never had a revolver.

Thomas Reilly, a brother of the defendant, corroborated.

Mr. Walter Callan, for the defence, said that the whole case turned on the question of identification, and he submitted that the identification was weak.

VERDICT OF GUILTY.

Judge Doyle said that it was a very fortunate circumstance for Richard Malone that one of the inmates of his house was Laurence Delaney. Delaney was a man who spent some time in Australia. Carey also deserved considerable credit.

If the jury had a reasonable doubt they should give the defendant the benefit of it.

After an absence of 40 minutes the jury found the prisoner guilty.

Evidence of good character was given.

The Judge said that he would let the defendant out and see how he would conduct himself between this and the next Sessions before imposing any sentence. Defendant must be there at the next Court, and then he would see what he would do.

Defendant was remanded in custody until bail was forthcoming. The bails were fixed at one personal recognisance of £20 and two of £10 each, or one of £20.

At the end of the case the judge warmly shook hands with Mr. Delaney.

RIVALS FOR A GREAT MARKET.

FOREWORD.

ALL the great wars have been fought for trade. A thousand years before the Christian Era a King of Northern Asia Minor used his command of the Hellespont to impose heavy tolls on the grain-ships from the Black Sea. At last the cities of Greece, finding the nuisance intolerable, sent their fleets and armies against Troy, and razed it to the soil. Homer wrote a poem about this expedition, and his Helen is an immortal figure of romance; but modern research has unveiled the plainer truth. It was not Helen's face, but the need of cheaper bread in Argos and Lacedæmon, that "burnt the topless towns of Ilium." Thus it has been through the ages. Trade is the main source of rivalry between nations, and its methods are not the less merciless even when they are the methods of peace. The "devil takes the hindmost" as inexorably in the money-markets as after a stricken field, and the country that loses trade loses everything. To-day, although her little army keeps its barracks, the Irish Free State is engaged in a fierce war—a war for trade. The arena is the British market—the richest market in Europe—and the Saorstat's rivals are gathering from every corner of the Seven Seas. The most formidable of them, however, at this time is Denmark, a country small like herself, and preponderatingly agricultural. So we have pictured on this page the two rivals, with the great prize between them. It is high time that Irish farmers shall realise the magnitude of the issues which are at stake; for just now the battle is going against them. All recent statistics point to one momentous fact: in the British market Denmark is gaining ground and Ireland is losing it.

Fas est et ab hoste doceri and in this respect Denmark is a generous enemy: indeed, she has nothing to hide. The bases of her success are open to the whole world's inspection and imitation. They are found in the practical pride and patriotism which cause every Dane to regard himself as a national asset; in hard work and an enlightened outlook, and in the treatment of agriculture as a progressive science. Irish farmers have decided, at long last, to take lessons from their Danish competitors, and this Supplement is designed as a memorial of an event which may have large consequences for the Saorstat—the recent visit to Denmark of a party of farmers from County Cork. Hitherto, we fear, our people have been bored rather than stimulated by lectures on Danish efficiency, just as the Athenians were bored by the virtues of Aristides; but these Cork farmers have seen with their own eyes: and they have seen much. They have seen that nearly eighty per cent. of the total area of Denmark is under profitable agriculture, and that the country, about one-half the size of Ireland, supports a population as large as the Saorstat's in far greater comfort than the Saorstat's people enjoy. They have seen that in most of the practice of agriculture Denmark is "years ahead of Ireland"—in the use of electrical power, in the breeding of cattle, in the production of milk, in the standardising and marketing of all the output of the farm. They have seen that science can lend an almost æsthetic aspect to the management of pigs. Especially have these Irish visitors discovered that the mainspring of Denmark's progress is the educational system that has made of every Danish farmer a man who is not only eager, but able, to turn new ideas and discoveries to the uses of his daily work. It is the Danish schoolmaster who has organised his country's formidable attack upon the British market.

We hope that many other parties of Irish farmers will follow the example of the men from Cork. We wish that the whole body of Free State Ministers could be induced to make a tour of Denmark. It would bring a greater profit to themselves and to Ireland than their far-flung excursions to Geneva and Washington. Drastic reforms in the conduct of Irish agriculture are needed before we can expect to compete on level terms with Denmark in the British market. The recent legislation for the enforcement of better methods of export ought to be helpful; but no radical change will be made until both the Government and people of the Free State realise the full gravity of the present situation. Here is the situation in a nutshell:—Great Britain is not merely the Free State's best, but her only, customer. Without the British market the Saorstat, which lives almost entirely on her agricultural exports, would be as dead as the moon. Yet her foothold in that vital market is failing from day to day. The present year has witnessed a truly alarming decrease in her exports of cattle, butter and bacon. The quality of her live-stock is deteriorating, and, while Denmark is ousting her bacon, eggs and butter, Canada is making a steadily increasing assault on her former monopoly of the cattle business. No tariffs on imports, no flirtations with the visionary charms of foreign markets can begin to compensate Ireland for the material curtailment of her British trade. Public opinion ought to compel the Free State Government to recognise this fact and to throw all its forces into the battle on which our country's life depends.
